We Want Blood. Imagination's Power. Government Take All. Loaves and Fishes Miracle.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

NATIONAL GUARDSMEN were still pursuing strikers in Ohio yesterday, two men killed, a good many wounded, citizens not concerned with the strike or the fight driven from the dangerous strike area by soldiers with fixed bayonets. Strikers, enraged by the death of their comrades, hurled bricks and bottles at the soldiers, crying out, according to reporters:

"We want blood."

Soldiers, in what is real war against the men on strike, carry with them repeating rifles, machine-guns, guns that throw bombs and tear gas. They, the soldiers, are equipped with gas masks, so that they can use the tear gas against the strikers without breathing it themselves or having it get into their eyes.

THE STRIKERS believe they are in the right, the soldiers, obey orders, but it all comes unpleasantly near to real war. And it suggests that government may be compelled to do something about strikes, in the way of arbitration, in spite of the fact that organized labor objects to arbitration for two reasons—first, because it would diminish the importance of organized labor leaders, and second, because those leaders do not trust the fairness of government or that of the arbitrators that might be selected.

Ordinarily it is desirable to let labor leaders and others manage their business in their own way, but if it is a question of war and death, and the right of the citizens generally to peace and safety, something will have to be done.

WILLIAM A. ROBINSON, American explorer, was critically ill on the Galapagos Islands, far out in the ocean, where giant turtles live six or seven hundred years and longer, growing big enough to carry two men on their backs. A man ill and alone in such surroundings stimulates the imagination, so airplanes were sent and finally a destroyer of the United States Navy brought doctors that removed Mr. Robinson's appendix and took him to a hospital on the mainland.

This shows that to attract attention, you must stir the imagination.

ON SHORE, among millions of others, Mr. Robinson's plight would have attracted no airplane or destroyer.

The late Nathan Straus, who protected children of this and other countries by fighting the sale of poisonous, impure milk, used to say:

"If a man hired Madison Square Garden in New York and announced that at a certain time he would publicly kill one child, he would be torn to pieces. The same man can start a milk company, kill thousands of children with milk poisoned by deadly germs, and attract no attention."

MRS. WHITELAW REID, widow of Whitelaw Reid, formerly Ambassador of the United States to Great Britain, died in 1931, leaving a net estate of $18,589,916. The estate, just settled, is found, because of shrinkage in stock values, to have diminished by $7,000,000 in three years. Nevertheless, the children of Mrs. Reid and others named in the will must pay a heavy inheritance tax on the $7,000,000 that does not exist.

The government theory is that your heirs must pay inheritance tax on what you own when you die, no matter how much the fortune has shrunk when the heirs get it. The heirs of the late Julius Rosenwald, who had given many millions to charity, received from Mr. Rosenwald's estate barely enough to to pay the government tax. In other words, it took practically all. That seems too much to all except extremists in the "soak the rich" camp.

NEW YORK learns that the miracle of the loaves and the fishes can be repeated on a bigger scale by those that know how, without any "miracle." For instance, there is the case of a judge of the Municipal Court, named Harold L. Kunstler.

Busybodies show that during four years, while Justice Kunstler was earning a total salary of $40,000, he deposited in various banks the sum of $166,650.59. "Justice" Kunster admits that he made these deposits, but says he has a wretched memory, and is unable "even to suggest" where he got the $126,650.59 more than he earned. He said the fact that he stopped his depositing in banks in 1931 had nothing to do with his fear that somebody might investigate.

THAT IS ONE "loaves and fishes" demonstration. Another is that of officers and employes of a title firm in White Plains, N. Y., that, when they felt the need of money, simply borrowed it from the company, although the aw foroids that. One director alone borrowed $575,000.

Men, it is said, get the kind of government and the kind of laws that they deserve, also the kind of law enforcement. That seems to be the case.

SIR ROBERT MOND, distinguished British financier, of Jewish ancestry, who arrived yesterday, says Hitler's Nazi movement in Germany was financed by large German employers, seeking to smash the trade union movement. If that be so, those large employers have achieved their object for the time being. Trade unions are smashed in Germany, almost as completely as they are in Italy.

SECRETARY ICKES asked employes under him:

"Would you rather continue working from nine in the morning until half past four

COYNE VOTE TRIAL DEFENSE ASSAILS U.S. STAR WITNESS

FIRE FEARED IN TOLEDO STRIKE

Machine Gun-Cavalry Troops Called as Peace Deal Fails

TOLEDO, O., May 26.—(AP.)—Militiamen tightened their lines about the riot zone at the Electric Auto-Lite plant today, frankly worried over a fire menace as one man was booked on an arson charge.

A man who gave his name as Thomas Meyer, 26, was arrested by national guardsmen in the area where renewed rifle fire broke out early today in the wake of strikers' rejection of a peace proposal.

His arrest followed an investigation of a series of incendiary fires during the night.

Military passes were being issued today for the first time to newspaperment and others who wished to enter the riot zone.

MACHINE GUN TROOPS

Orders were issued for the Toledo machine gun cavalry troop, which has been holding itself ready for strike duty, to proceed with horses and guns to the downtown armory.

In an early morning outbreak, National Guard Lieut. Verne Silbaugh, of Lima, O., was shot in the thigh by a sniper. His wound was not serious.

National Guard Lieut. Verne Silbaugh, of Lima, O., was shot in the thigh by a sniper. His wound was not serious.

Payton Case, 36, was admitted to a hospital with severe jaw wounds caused by a gas projectile. Peter Bruner, 42, was treated for a bayonet wound.

Walter Noland, 36, received three hip wounds he said were inflicted by bayonets. John O. Quigley, a nearby resident, reported he was shot in the ankle.

The firing later subsided.

HEYWOOD BROUN NABBED

Seventy men were detained by guardsmen after the outbreak. Capt. Kenneth Cooper said Heywood Broun, New York writer and once a Socialist candidate for Congress, and an unidentified newspaperman were among them.

Broun explained he was obtaining material for a story, and the two were released, Capt. Cooper said.

The peace proposal was submitted at a meeting of 1,900 strikers in Memorial Hall, by Charles P. Taft, federal mediator.

It was rejected.

The union will meet again late today to discuss the next steps to be taken, or to draft a truce plan of its own.

Wtihdrawal of troops was another demand.

GENERAL STRIKE AGITATION

Meanwhile, strong agitation for advancing the date of a proposed general strike here was under way in labor circles.

The original set-up for the proposed walk-out of all union workmen here had called for a mass meeting June 1, in Courthouse Square, when the committee handling the arrangements would announce the date of the strike.

Labor leaders who would not be quoted said considerable pressure was being brought to bear to call the strike immediately.

Greatest Progress Is Ahead of Us, Says W. R. Hearst

CHICAGO, May 26.

Universal Service.

William Randolph Hearst addressed the following to 300 notables, assembled here last night at the invitation of Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors Corporation, on the eve of the opening of the World's Fair:

"I THINK the Century of Progress is ahead of us and not behind us.

"The world has progressed consistently as the centuries have passed.

"If it has not progressed in one place it has in another, and the sum total has spelled consistent progress.

"There is no reason to believe that the human mind has reached the limit of its development, or that America has ceased to be the center of intellectual development and industrial progress.

"There is, consequently, every reason to believe that this great nation will go forward with greater and surer strides than ever before and that the beginning of the greatest era of progress is now —not at some distant date, not even on the morrow, —but now.

"WE ARE already on our way.

"We can be helped or hindered by governmental action; but nothing can prevent our progress.

"Communism may confuse, Fascism may complicate our situation.

"A sounder financial program, a more flexible monetary system may stimulate recovery.

"Extravagance of administration, unjust and excessive taxation may hamper it.

"But nothing can preclude an immediate era of prosperity greater than we have ever known.

"IF I could have the pleasure of being with you this evening, I would offer a toast to what your great exhibition signifies and signalizes in my mind.

"A toast to the Century of Progress ahead of us—a toast to the greatest country—to the greatest century—to the greatest progress in the history of the world."

WOMAN TAKES STAND AGAINST SENATOR, 11 OTHERS

BULLETIN.

Judge Schoonmaker today refused to allow James P. Bailey's charges against Mayor McNair to be injected into the Coyne trial.

Attorney O. K. Eaton had wanted to ask Bailey, who was on the witness stand, whether he hadn't accused the Mayor falsely. Judge Schoonmaker ruled the matter irrevelant.

Nell Lewellyn, member of the Fourth District, Tenth Ward, election board, who was quoted as one of the members the Coyne faction could not "handle," took the stand shortly before noon.

The defense struck out today with a slashing attack on James P. Bailey, the government's star witness against State Senator James J. Coyne and 11 other Republicans accused of conspiring to steal the November election of 1932.

Bailey was accused of threatening to "get" Senator Coyne and Patrick J. O'Malley, both defendants, and Congressman Michael J. Muldowney.

He was accused of intimating he would have the three of them sent "some place where they wouldn't bother about politics for a long time."

He was described as sour against the Coyne political machine because he blamed the Senator for the loss of his job, in 1932, as head of the city's Bureau of Weights and Measures.

A blanket denial was entered to all these accusations by the smiling defendant—the same Bailey who yesterday testified that O'Malley had asked his help to steal the election, the same who has charged that Mayor McNair and his secretary, Theodore L. Moritz, asked him to testify in Coyne's favor.

THREATS CHARGED

Attorney Oliver K. Eaton, counsel for Coyne, contended that Bailey, who two weeks ago was fired as a city assessor, had made these threatening statements in the presence of numerous employes in the city's Weights and Measures office—A. F. Nolan, John Joseph Delohanty, Walter Cochran, William L. Cooney, John McParland, William J. Loughrey.

Most of these men are still in the city's employe and Eaton's line of questioning indicated they would be called as witnesses for the defense next week.

Bailey appeared undisturbed by Eaton's charges. He smiled frequently. Dappr in a light summer suit, a lapel kerchief, a red charity poppy, he crossed his legs,

OUSTED SLEUTH VANISHES

Almost on the eve of his trial in connection with a 0600 jewelry holdup, former City Detective James McCoy, 37, Juniata street, North Side, was reported missing today.

Members of his family asked the Missing Persons Bureau to search for the former sleuth, who, they said, had been despondent over his dismissal from the force, his forthcoming trial and inability to find another job.

McCoy and another city detective, Edward McEntee, were dismissed after other detectives said they found a diamond, recovered as loot in a holdup, in McEntee's possession. McEntee also faces trial.

McCoy disappeared from his home yesterday, members of his family reported to police.

MELLON SEEKS TAX REFUND

By JOHN P. COWAN

Sun-Telegraph Correspondent

WASHINGTON, May 26.—Andrew W. Mellon, absolved by a federal grand jury of charges of income tax evasion brought by Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, struck back today and revealed inside facts concerning the government's prosecution of the case.

In a petition filed with the United States Board of Tax Appeals asking it to redetermine his income tax liability of 1931, and order the commissioner to refund $139,045.17, which he claims was overpaid, Mr. Mellon declares that in the summer of 1933 agents of the Bureau of Internal Revenue stated that his taxes had

STRIKE SPEEDS WAGNER BILL

WASHINGTON, May 26.—(AP.)—Recurring strike violence pushed to the forefront today the Wagner bill giving more power to the National Labor Board.

The Senate Labor Committee met to act on the bill and Chairman Walsh (Dem.), of Massachusetts, predicted the committee would vote it out today. He said he expected the Senate would pass it this session, a question on which there has been much doubt.

President Roosevelt, calling the bill helpful, is keeping a constant eye on the strike situation at Toledo, and there was reason to believe new federal action for peace would be taken if necessary.

The whole labor situation—complicated by threats of nation-wide strikes for union recognition—was discussed at a cabinet meeting yesterday.

U. S. GOLF STAR WINS TITLE

PRESTWICK, Scotland, May 26.—Smashing all existing records for the classic tournament, W. Lawson Little, 23-year-old Californian, defeated James Wallace, Scottish carpenter, 14 and 13, for the British Amateur golf championship here today.

Little broke all records for this seaside course in the morning round when he shot a 66 to gain a lead of 12 up. He was three under par for the five holes played in the afternoon, and eight under par for the match.

Little's margin of victory was the most one-sided ever registered; his lead of 12 up after the morning round was the greatest any finalist ever enjoyed; his 66 for the first 18 shattered the course record.

Century of Progress Launches New Wonderland for America

1934 Edition of Fair Opens in Sparkle Of New Color

CHICAGO, May 26.—(AP.)—The Chicago World's Fair, in glittering, new dress, opened its return engagement today.

Revamped and refurbished, the 1934 edition of the Century of Progress Exposition presented a new wonderland of shining buildings, transplanted villages, placid lagoons and soaring fountains. Buildings which last year were resplendent by night under the glare of colored lights but drab by day, sparkled in festive coats of varicolored paints. New spires and towers broke the horizon, formerly severe with modernistic curves and angles.

Fair officials predicted the opening day crowd would exceed that of last year.

The first feature of the re-opening was a parade in the afternoon with 10,000 members of civil, Army and Navy groups in line, reviewed by Gov. Henry Horner, of Illinois; Mayor Edward J. Kelly, of Chicago, and Rufus Dawes, president of the exposition.

The principal opening ceremonies, however, were reserved for the evening.

At 9 p. m., talking pictures will be shown at three theaters on the fair grounds and in them President Roosevelt will make a few remarks and press a button. By synchronization, the lights of the fair, which officials predict will bring gasps of delight, will be turned on.

A moment later, through the same medium, Mrs. Roosevelt will touch another button and the world's largest fountain will send water high into the air at the rate of 68,000 gallons a minute as mammoth lights play upon it.

Participating in the night ceremony by short wave radio, if atmospheric conditions permit, will be Admiral Richard Byrd, from his isolated camp in Little America.

Fair-goers of 1933 found the old midway razed and in its place a street of villages, each offering replicas of famous streets and buildings of foreign lands. Fair officials predicted that the villages would be the most popular feature of the new exposition.

U. S. STAR WITNESS 'SOUR ON COYNE,' DEFENSE CHARGES

THREATS TO GET SENATOR, O'MALLEY LAID TO OUSTED ASSESSOR

leaned back in the witness chair at ease, placed a new straw hat alongside, and rested an arm on the arm of the chair.

WOMAN AWAITS CALL

Waiting to follow him to the stand were Nell Lewellyn, attractive young brunette and first woman witness of the trial, and a surprise witness, Robert K. Boyer, the Mt. Lebanon Township Commissioner, whose testimony helped to convict Dr. Joseph G. Steedle, the McKees Rocks Assemblyman, on Wednesday.

Boyer was in the antiquated Federal Building awaiting his turn to testify. It was he who told of being asked to contribute $200 to a vote-stealing plot in Scott and Stowe townships and Carnegie—a plot he said that was advanced to him by Dr. Steedle in the office of Squire James J. Westwood, convicted with Steedle.

Miss Llewellyn sat in court yesterday and heard Bailey testify that Patrick J. O'Malley, one of the defendants, was anxious that she go home early on election night so that the ballots could be "doctored."

Bailey quoted O'Malley as complaining there were two members of the board who couldn't be "handled"—Miss Lewellyn and one Martin O'Malley (no relation).

Miss Lewellyn's mother was ill on election night. She died two weeks later.

AIM AT COYNE

Government prosecutors aimed their guns especially at Senator Coyne and four other of the defendants—the Senator's brother, Tom; Walter Butler, Martin Mullen and Pat O'Malley, the Strip leader.

The closest Prosecutors James I. Marsh and Louis E. Graham came to the Senator was with the testimony of Bailey—the same Bailey who has charged that Mayor McNair and the Mayor's secretary, Theodore L. Moritz, wanted him to favor Coyne in his testimony.

Bailey testified that on election night Pat O'Malley came out to the Tenth Ward to see him and said:

"The Senator sent me out to see you. The whole damn works is sunk. Coyne's defeated, the Legislature's lost and Muldowney and Erk's lost . . . I asks him what he wants and he says Mart Mullen can't reach those two members of the board . . . I says, 'Mart Mullen is your man out here, why don't you have him try it again?' Mullen was standing by his steps with a fire captain and a city detective."

Tom Coyne and Walter Butler, both minor politicians in the Senator's Fourth Ward, were implicated with the testimony of Charles R. McCoy, judge of elections in the Eleventh District of the Fourth Ward.

'RUNNING SHORT'

McCoy testified that on election night the pair came to him and Butler asked:

"Got any straight Democratic ballots? The Senator and Muldowney are running short."

McCoy said he replied:

"Nothing doing! The ballots are cast and they're going to stay cast."

Whereupon Coyne, according to the witness, criticized:

"You're a helluva guy to be a judge."

McCoy testified there was a third person by the name of Fink with Coyne and Butler, but he was unable to identify bulky Harry Fink, the constable, when Fink stood up in the courtroom.

McCoy, followed to the stand Charles G. Lane, Jr., and Charles W. McGinnis, an insurance sales manager. Both were active in the Republican Service League's headquarters in the William Penn Hotel campaigning for Hoover.

Prosecutor Marsh twice pleaded surprise at Lane's testimony, contending he was not telling the same story he gave the grand jury.

Lane told of visiting Coyne's room in the William Penn on election night and telling the Senator for that Walter Bonitz, known for his campaign contributions, wanted Coyne to 'phone him in New York. Lane testified the door to the Senator's room was not locked. Marsh argued that he had testified before the grand jury it was locked.

TELLS OF HOTEL VISIT

The second plea came when Marsh complained that Lane was giving a different version of some casual election conversion in the soldiers' headquarters when Coyne was present.

Lane was a defeated Coyne candidate for the Juvenile Court bench last year.

Both he and McGinnis told substantially the same story. McGinnis said the Senator, the late Mayor Charles H. Kline and United States Senator James J. Davis were among those who visited the soldier headquarters on the sixteenth floor of the hotel. Coyne's room was 897.

McGinnis testified that he accompanied Lane to the Senator's room, that there were five or six others present, but he said he knew none of them. Later during a tiff between counsel, the defense seemed to score when Judge F. P. Schoonmaker held that McGinnis' testimony that he knew none of the others "precluded the possibility" that any of the defendants were in the room.

Thus far the government has produced little if any testimony aimed at Alderman John Verona and John Fugassi, the Hill leaders.

McGinnis did testify that Fugassi dropped into the soldier headquarters that night and talked with the Senator for a few minutes. But that was all.

It was in the William Penn Hotel that the government prosecutors contend the plot to set out and steal the election was hatched.

DEFENDANTS NAMED

On trial with Coyne are Alderman John J. Verona, Third Ward leader; John Fugassi, long a voice in inner political circles; Patrick J. O'Malley, Republican chairman of the Strip's Second Ward; former Fire Captain Louis J. Conley, chairman of the Ninth Ward; Tom Coyne, the Senator's brother; Assemblyman Patrick J. Maloney; George W. Savange, former city assessor; Frank O'Halloran, deputy mercantile appraiser; Martin Mullen, Tenth Ward district chairman; Walter Butler, former district chairman of the Fourth Ward, and Harry Fink, private detective and former deputy constable for Verona.

DERN TO VISIT ARMY POSTS

WASHINGTON, May 26.—(AP.)—Secretary of War Dern had disclosed today plans—most of them tentative—for a busy summer inspecting Army posts and projects.

After attending the fleet review May 31 in New York, he will go to Salt Lake City to deliver the commencement address and receive a degree at the University of Utah. He may stop in Omaha on his way for an inspection of that corps area headquarters.

Dern said he would like to go to the Panama Canal, and may sail on June 19 on an Army transport from San Francisco. That plan is subject to developments.

If he did not go to Panama, Dern said, he would visit Seattle and Fort Lewis, Washington; inspect the Bonneville Dam project, and return to Washington by way of the Fort Peck project in Montana.

DECREE DOOMS IRISH SENATE

DUBLIN, May 26.—(AP.)—An official decree of death for the Senate of the Irish Free State, effective a year hence, brought Ireland today a step nearer the republic of which President Eamon De Valera dreams.

A bill abolishing the Upper House was passed finally by the Dail Eireann, 54 to 38, and De Valera, storming at British control, commented that the government would expect Great Britain to stand aside and let the Irish form a republic of the people. He said:

"We are as old a nation as Britain. If we want a republic we are entitled to it."

The Senate, of course, will throw the Dail's bill out. That will make no difference. The bill thrice passed the Dail, assuring its effectiveness.

TESTIMONY HEARD AT COYNE TRIAL

The bitter feud between the Coyne O'Malley faction and James P. Bailey, former city assessor, brought drama into the trial of State Senator James J. Coyne and 11 others in Federal Court.

Bailey, who gave his address as 5258 Dresden way, Tenth Ward, declared he was a watcher at the election November 8, 1932. He appeared as a prosecution witness, and was questioned by James I. Marsh.

He was recalled to the stand as the first witness today, Attorneys Edward G. Coll and Mead Mulvihill cross-examining as to the surroundings when he is said to have been approached by Patrick J. O'Malley.

Q.—Did you see a policeman named O'Connor or a man named McClaren (outside Martin Mullen's home on election night)?

A.—No.

Q.—You know both of them, don't you?

A.—I know O'Connor.

Q.—You say you saw Mullen going toward the polling place?

A.—Yes. I was pulling out in my car. He was standing in front of his steps.

Q.—Are you friendly with Martin Mullen?

A.—Personally, not politically.

Q.—When was the last time you spoke to him?

A.—He quit speaking to me after I appeared before the grand jury.

Q.—Isn't it a fact that you quit speaking to Martin Mullen after a quarrel over the discharge of a city employe?

A.—No, sir.

Attorney O. K. Eaton then took up the cross-examination after after objections to his questions by government counsel were decided at a sidebar conference.

Q.—Did you in December, 1932, know a man named John McParland?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you say to him "I'll put James J. Coyne and O'Malley out of politics if it's the last thing I do?"

A.—No.

Prosecutor Graham demanded time and place, and Eaton declared the time in early December, 1932, and the place in or about the weights and measures office, City-County Building.

Q.—Did you say anything like that to McParland?

A.—No.

Q.—Do you know a William J. Loughrey? Was he employed at the weights and measures?

A.—Yes.

Q.—In the presence of Loughrey did you say you blamed James J. Coyne and Mr. Muldowney for eliminating your job and say "watch my statements in the newspapers drive them out of politics?"

A.—No.

Q.—Do you know A. F. Nolan, who was employed in the weights and measures office?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you say in his presence that you blamed the whole thing—the elimination of your job—on Coyne, O'Malley and Muldowney and you would run them out of politics if it was the last thing you did?

A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you say in the presence of John Joseph Delehanty, who was employed in weights and measures, "Watch my statements in the newspapers, O'Malley, Muldowney and Coyne will be out of politics?"

A.—No, sir (smiling).

Q.—Did you say in the presence of Walter E. Cochran, who was employed in weights and measures, that James J. Coyne was to blame for the change that eliminated your position and you would get Coyne?

A.—No, sir.

To this line of questioning Prosecutor Graham objected, but the leading questions in each case were allowed, Judge Schoonmaker forbidding more than one question on each statement.

Q.—Did you say in the presence of William L. Cooney, who was employed in weights and measures, if it was the last thing you did you would send Coyne, O'Malley and Muldowney some place where they wouldn't bother about politics for a long time?

A.—No, sir.

Q.—You were bitter against Coyne?

A.—No, sir.

Q.—You're a friend of his?

A.—Yes, sir. I admire him personally, not politically.

Q.—Would you say you're a warm friend?

A.—Oh, well, I don't know that.

Q.—Who was on the election board of the Fourth District, Tenth Ward?

A.—Martin O'Malley, John Mullen, Nell Llewellyn and two others I did not know.

Q.—How long did you stay at the polls?

A.—Until about 9:30.

Q.—Where did you go after that?

A.—Home.

Q.—Did you get any phone calls at home?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Who called?

A.—Patrick O'Malley.

Q.—You know his voice?

A.—Yes.

Q.—What was the conversation?

A.—He asked me to meet him at Fifty-third street and Carnegie.

Q.—How far is that from your house?

A.—A short distance. And I agreed to meet him.

Q.—Did you meet him?

A.—Yes.

Q.—What happened?

A.—I arrived early. I drove around and he was coming down the steps of Martin Mullen's house. He walked over to my machine.

Q.—What was the conversation?

A.—He says to me, "The Senator sent me out to see you. The whole d—— works is sunk. Coyne's defeated; the legislature's lost and Muldowney and Erk lost. There's heavy Democratic ballots in your district and I'd like them turned in for those different offices."

I asks him what he wants and he says: "Mart Mullen can't reach those two members of the board, especially Nellie Llewellyn." I says, "Mart Mullen is your man out here, why don't you have him try it again."

Mullen was standing by his steps with a fire captain and a city detective.

Q.—Who were they?

A.—John Ragino was the fire captain and Albert Barry the detective. Then O'Malley went with them and they walked away towards the polling place.

Q.—Did you go to the polling place? Did you see Nellie?

A.—No.

Q.—What did you do?

A.—I went to a friend's home.

Attorney Edward G. Coll, counsel for O'Malley, took up the cross-examination.

Q.—You've lived in that district 10 or 12 years?

A.—Over 10.

Q.—Prior to the time you mention you hadn't spoken to O'Malley for two years?

A.—No sir.

Q.—And you recognized the voice on the telephone although you hadn't heard it for two years?

A—I didn't mean I hadn't spoken to O'Malley for two years. I never quit speaking to him. I saw him nearly every other day.

Q.—When did you speak to him prior to November 8, 1932, on the phone.

A.—I don't believe I ever did.

Q.—And you swear you recognized his voice on the phone?

A.—Yes.

Q.—You took your car to go half a block, and why didn't you walk?

A.—Yes.

Q.—And you didn't find him at Fifty-third and Carnegie?

A.—I didn't.

Q.—And you found him in front of Mullen's.

A.—Yes.

Q.—Isn't it dark in front of Mullen's?

A.—The hall light was on.

Q.—But outside, was it dark, how about the outside light?

A.—The outside was light.

Q.—Did you see more than the three at the steps?

A.—Not that I recall.

Q.—After you left there where did you go?

A.—To a friend's house.

Q.—Who?

A.—He's dead. And I so revere his memory that unless I have to I would prefer not to bring his name into this case.

Q.—The mention of his name will not make his memory any less revered, will it?

Bailey looked at Judge Schoonmaker, who leaned back, cogitated, then conferred with counsel. The point was not pressed.

Q.—Now just what did O'Malley asked you to do?

A.—He asked me to change the Democratic ballots to assist the Congress and Legislature candidates. I told him Mullen was his man. He said he couldn't handle those two people (on the board). He wanted me to ask the girl, Nell Llewellyn, to go home. He wanted the two of them—O'Malley and the girl—to go.

Q.—O'Malley! The same name as the defendant?

A.—Yes, but no relation.

Q.—How did you vote at the election?

A.—I voted as my conscience dictated, the Republican ticket.

Q.—Your conscience has changed since, hasn't it? . . . Now isn't it true that you blamed O'Malley for losing your job?

A.—Absolutely not. I wasn't fired, my job was abolished.

Q.—Didn't you say you were going to get even with O'Malley even if you had to frame him?

A.—Absolutely not.

Before Bailey, Charles P. McCoy, judge of elections in the Eleventh District, Fourth Ward, was called to the stand.

Government counsel asked him about the election:

Q.—What took place?

A.—Butler came into the polling place and said Tom Coyne wants to see you outside. I went out and Butler asks me, "Got any straight Democrat ballots, the Senator and Muldowney is running short." Whereupon I said nothing doing, the ballots are cast and for me they'll stay as they're cast and Tom Coyne said:

"You're a helluva fellow to be judge of elections."

A guy named Fink didn't say anything.

Objections by counsel interposed, and Attorney Harry Bowitz, representing Harry Fink, cross-questioned:

Q.—Did anyone see you talking to these men?

A.—I don't know.

Q.—How far were you from the polls?

A.—I'm not sure, maybe 10 or 20 feet.

Q.—Is the Fink you saw in the court room?

A.—No, I don't see him.

Harry Fink stood up and McCoy said:

"That is not the man I saw."

Herron Gets $6,500 Viewer Board Job

Former Mayor John S. Herron was elected a member of the county board of viewers to succeed the late Edwin E. Phillips, by Common Pleas Court judges yesterday. The salary is $6,500 a year. The board is composed of nine members. More than 60 persons applied for the position.

The judges also reelected David B. Oliver, Dr. E. B. Heckel and Howard B. Walters as members of the board of trustees of Thorn Hill School.

2 Pittsburghers Hurt When Auto Hits Tree

Gate Crashing Difficult At Trial of Coyne

The crowds milling around the Federal building balcony outside the court room where the Coyne trial was going on were kept out of the trial room by ropes and Court Attaches Ed Holden, James Walsh and W. M. Risher. Subterfuges to get in meant little. Only witnesses and attorneys could crash the gate.

Employes of the District Attorney's offices, to whom trials are every day routine, slipped in between duties, however. They came mostly to glimpse Senator Coyne, and the recent candidate for governor, Charles J. Margiotti, who is John J. Verona's counsel, and O. K. Eaton and Edward G. Coll, three of the county's leading barristers.

Coyne sat beside the window overlooking Third avenue. He chewed gum and smiled, and looked out the window except when some witness mentioned his name. Ten times they called him "The Senator" for each time they called him Senator Coyne. He commented:

"I like that window. I get my ultra-violet rays there."

Pat O'Malley sat transfixed while James Bailey, who testified against him, was in the witness box.

When Witness Charles W. McGinnis described Coyne as "a typical Irishman," the O'Malleys, O'Hallorans, Mullens and others of Irish extraction and as dissimilar in appearance as possible, looked at each other. John Fugassi smiled, but Johhn J. Verona's stolid expression was unchanged. The court and attorneys, defendants and witnesses enjoyed the comment.

M'NAIR LISTENS AS PALS 'PAN' ADVISORS

You're Honest, Bill, but You've Let Down Your Friends, Mayor Told

The "boys" down at the Henry George Club talked frankly with Mayor William McNair yesterday. They told him he had been led astray by his advisors and they said he "had let down his friends."

Francis X. McCulloch, McNair's candidate for Democratic county chairman, said:

"Nobody questions your honesty, Bill, but you've been darn poorly advised. Your friends haven't let you down—you've let them down."

The Mayor interjected:

"What about this mess I'm in now?"

LED ASTRAY

McCulloch replied:

"Moritz (Magistrate Theodore Moritz, the Mayor's secretary) got you into that just the same as he got you in bad over the city enforcing the liquor laws."

The Mayor's advisers who have led him astray, according to McCulloch, are Mrs. Templeton Smith, Dr. Ray P. Moyer and the Director of Public Safety (nameless).

These frank outbursts followed a discussion of the city's insurance problem by William B. Foster, who, as a member of the Board of Assessors, is the Mayor's insurance representative.

NOT WORRIED

Mayor McNair said:

"For the last six months my friends have been out to get me—but I'm not worried a bit.

"Putting the Mayor on the spot has become the biggest indoor sport.

"If I'd open up the rackets tomorrow—if I'd open three gambling places downtown—I'd be the most popular Mayor Pittsburgh ever had."

Weather Conditions

High pressure, centered over the lake region, is still dominating the weather over most of the interior of the country. Relatively low pressure along the Atlantic Coast is causing showers over that section, and there were scattered light showers in the Far West. The drouth continues in the Middle West. Temperatures are now rising over the Ohio Valley states and westward over the plains states, but there was frost this morning over the mountains of West Virginia, in Ohio, and in Michigan. The weather will remain moderately warm for the next several days.

SENATE HEARS OF TUGWELL

WASHINGTON, May 26.—An editorial in the Washington Herald titled "Tugwellism," declaring Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell, chief brain truster, preaches doctrines subversive to American ideals, was read to the United States Senate.

Senator Hatfield (Rep.), of West Virginia, obtained unanimous consent to insert the editorial in the Congressional Record, and Senator Long (Dem.), of Louisiana, then asked that it be read.

Hatfield, referring to his own previous denunciations of Tugwell as "renouncing the Constitution," said:

"It is encouraging indeed to find a great newspaper organization, such as the Hearst group, placing before the American people the facts about this man."

Rainey Tells U. S. Plan For Huge Spending

HARRISBURG, May 26.—(AP.)—Speaker Henry T. Rainey, of the House of Representatives, says that the administration will set a world's record during the next year in expenditures for economic recovery. He told the Pennsylvania Insurance Federation last night:

"We are not heeding the warnings of unsound business. We are approaching another era of big business in which the ordinary man will participate, and we are headed there without the counsel of the Mellons and other representatives of great wealth.

"The administration plans to spend more for recovery in the next twelve months than ever has been spent before in the history of any nation of the world.

"There will be casualties, but we expect to make them as few as possible."

MELLON SEEKS INCOME TAX REFUND

Banker Strikes Back at Evasion Charges In Petition

been overpaid in the amount of $7,507.74.

In the face of these facts, the petition sets forth, the Attorney General on March 11, 1934, without any previous notice to Mr. Mellon, announced the investigation by the Federal Grand Jury.

The petition avers that Mr. Mellon was not given the same treatment accorded other taxpayers under the commissioner's regulations. The petitioner asserts:

"The commissioner departed from the usual practice and gave his notice of deficiency without the issuance of the usual 30-day letter, without any explanation whatever to the petitioner, without affording the petitioner any opportunity to file a protest and without granting any hearing to the petitioner."

The additional income taxes and penalty asserted by the commissioner, from which Mr. Mellon appealed, and which the petition states was set up at the instance of the Attorney General, amounts to $1,978,621.35. Mr. Mellon's petition to the board sets forth 18 different assignments of error.

Among the items protested are losses sustained on the sale of stock of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, Western Public Service Corporation, claiming an ordinary loss of $5,766.30 on the Pittsburgh Coal stock, and a capital loss amounting to $5,672,164.80, and an ordinary loss of $24,100 and a capital loss of $352,500 on the sale of Western Public Service stock.

Other contested items include deductions from charitable and other contributions and gifts made in 1931. In his petition he lists gifts to various charities amounting to $3,821,178.29, which he contends entitles him to the deductible percentage provided in the revenue act.

DIES IN FLAMES OF TRUCK CRASH

On the William Penn Highway their truck collided with a Pittsburgh-bound produce truck driven by Joseph Sunseri, 54, of Johnstown. UTOPIA WITHOUT NRA'S AWAITS MAN, SAVANTS TOLD

NEXT CENTURY PREVIEWED AT SLOAN DINNER

President Boosts New Deal in Reply To Messages

By COPELAND C. BURG
International News Service.

CHICAGO, May 26.—A world full of milk and honey, without depressions, even without NRA'S, awaits mankind.

Five hundred outstanding leaders in science and industry today offered pictures of an amazing twenty-first century in which motors will run by sunlight, airplanes fly by power sent from the ground and man himself seldom fail to realize the Biblical promise of a life of three-score years and ten.

These leaders, either in person or by statement, gave their views last night at a dinner tendered by Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors Corporation. It was called a "Preview of Industrial Progress in the Next Century," and was staged at A Century of Progress exposition grounds.

SEEN AS ATTACK ON NRA

Basing confidence in the future on their own knowledge as specialists in their chosen fields, they promised imminent and startling developments in radio, television, transportation, medicine, education, housing, food and communications.

Today some of the distinguished guests at the dinner interpreted the affair as one of the most subtle attacks yet made at Franklin D. Roosevelt's NRA.

They recalled that Sloan in opening the dinner said he called the leaders together "because of concern with the thinking men who believe that progress has ceased, that we must live by dividing up available jobs and accept a lower standard of living."

MESSAGES EXCHANGED

However, Sloan sent a telegram to President Roosevelt telling him a poll of the industrial leaders showed confidence in the future and promise of new enterprises and more jobs for more people. The President replied with assurances the federal government "will continue its efforts to stimulate employment and bring about higher standards of living."

In his telegram the President warned that "private business can and must help. The nation will remember those who are helping."

In the field of medicine Dr. C. H. Mayo and Dr. W. J. Mayo, Dr. Raymond Pearl, of Johns Hopkins University and Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Associatoin, agreed in a forecast of longevity as a result of laboratory research. They predicted the normal span of life will soon be 70 years, compared with 60 or less today and 35 years a century ago.

DUSTLESS CITY VISIONED

Cities with all dust and dirt and most noise eliminated, office buildings like shells with walls ready to insert at the renters' direction, non-metallic, transparent and non-breakable containers for foods, radio and screen presentations more perfect than ever dreamed of by stage experts and inventions giving man more time and means to seek and enjoy culture were forecast by Sloan's guests.

Other distinguished leaders in various fields who spoke or sent statements to the dinner were:

Charles F. Kettering, vice president of General Motors Corporation, in charge of research, who visioned a system of aerial transportation unaffected by fog and other weather conditions.

E. R. Breech, president of North American Aviation, who predicted regular transcontinental airplane schedules of 15 to 18 hours and multi-motored air liners crossing oceans on frequent schedules at about 200 miles an hour.

President Glenn Frank, of the University of Wisconsin, who advocated revision of school curricula and co-operation of universities and research institutes as insurance against social disaster.

Prof. Walter B. Pitkin, Columbia University, who spoke of a new day without wars, sickness or food shortages.

3-Min. Divorce

VIRGINIA BRUCE

JOHN GILBERT DIVORCED

LOS ANGELES, May 26.—(AP.)—John Gilbert, screen lover, was divorced yesterday for the fourth time.

Virginia Bruce, formerly of the Follies, got the decree. He is 36 and she 23.

They had been married a year and eight months. Custody of the baby, 9-months-old Susan Ann Gilbert, was awarded the wife.

Before this brief romance, Gilbert had been divorced from Olivia Burwell, a Mississippi girl, and Leatrice Joy and Ina Claire, both prominent on the screen.

SUES ACCUSER OF FAIRBANKS

LOS ANGELES, May 26.—(AP.)—Jorgen von Dietz, who brought two suits against Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., charging alienation of affections of his first wife and false imprisonment, both of which later was dismissed, was sued for divorce yesterday by his second wife, Helene Kovacs Dietz, known on the screen at Lucy Doraine.

Helene Dietz is the former wife of Michael Curtiz, film director.

She married Dietz shortly after he filed the two suits, asking a total of $70,000 damages, against Fairbanks, Jr. Dietz, in these suits, asserted the actor alienated the affections of his first wife, Loulou Solveig Dietz, Danish writer, then kept him locked in a hotel room until he would promise not to bring a divorce suit.

INDEPENDENT PRESBYTERIAN BOARD BANNED

Assembly Tells Church Members to Quit or Face Discipline

CLEVELAND, May 26.—(AP.)—The issue of fundamentalism flared to intensity yesterday as the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. adopted a report ordering any of its members affiliated with the "Independent Board for Foreign Presbyterian Missions" to resign from that organization at once, or open themselves to ecclesiastical discipline.

A group of fundamentalists led by the Rev. J. Gresham Machen of Philadelphia formed the independent board several months ago, alleging the church's regular board of missions was not in sympathy with the complete Presbyterian doctrine.

Sparks flew thick and fast as the assembly commissioners debated the report, submitted by its general council. The peak was reached when the Rev. Gustav Briegleb of Los Angeles, referring to unnamed clergymen, said it seemed apparent to him that some ministers of the church had taken their ordination vows "with their fingers crossed."

EDITOR ANSWERS

The Rev. H. McAllister Griffiths, another prominent Philadelphia fundamentalist, and managing editor of "Christianity Today," asserted he was the intended target of Dr. Briegleb's thrust and, raising his voice above the clamor of the session, demanded an apology.

Mr. Briegleb conceded, and apologized. Mr. Griffiths said he doubted the sincerity of the apology. Dr. Briegleb resumed his speech.

CLASH OVER DOCTRINE

Another controversy was touched upon during the debate over the independent board when the Rev. T. Roland Phillips, of Baltimore, offered an amendment calling for a trial of the Presbyterian clergymen who signed the "Auburn affirmation" in 1923.

Fundamentalists contend that document holds that a belief in the virgin birth of Christ is not essential Presbyterian doctrine, and that the signers, therefore, are not full believers in the Bible.

The Baltimore clergyman's amendment escaped a vote when the newly elected moderator, Dr. William Chalmers Covert, of Philadelphia, ruled it out of order.

A representative of the United Presbyterians, the Rev. John McNaugher, of Pittsburgh, was a guest speaker on yesterday's program. He asserted his church believes it has made broad concessions in coming to terms with the other denomination on doctrinal question, but he said he favored the merger. It will be voted on by the assembly next week.

Investigate Death Of Pitcairn Official

Wilson's body was found behind the steering wheel of his automobile on a road near Larimer, Pa.

MERCY PARTY NEARS PORT

COLON, Panama, May 26.—(AP.)—William Albert Robinson, who was stricken with acute appendicitis on a lonely South Sea isle, was doing "remarkably well" today after an emergency operation by naval surgeons, who flew 1,000 miles to save his life.

The explorer was safely aboard the United States destroyer Hale, speeding for Colon. At his side was his wife, who had accompanied him on their round-the-world honeymoon jaunt in the little ketch, Svaap, and had cared for him until radio pleas had brought aid.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—(AP.)—The Navy probably will pay between $1,000 and $2,000 for sending two airplanes on a journey of mercy 1,000 miles into the Pacific to save the life of W. A. Robinson.

TUBE MILL MEN FIGHT STRIKE

Employe representatives of the National Tube Company works in McKeesport today sent notices to all employes, urging them to take no part in the proposed nationwide steel holiday threatened for June 16. The notice read:

"Inasmuch as a large majority of the employes of National works has accepted the employe representation plan as their medium for collective bargaining, we, the duly elected representatives of the employes of the National works, serve notice to our fellow employes that we have not sanctioned any call whatsoever for a holiday and urge all those in sympathy with our present plan to refrain from participating in any such holiday."

It was signed by Alfred A. Griffith, chairman, and A. J. Flynn, Jr., secretary.

JAPS ABANDON PARITY CLAIMS

TOKIO, May 26.—Japan, fearing an Anglo-American combine at the 1935 naval conference, is ready, it was indicated today, to abandon any claims to naval parity with the United States and Great Britain.

These claims never have been enunciated by responsible officials. They have been hinted so strongly, however, that most observers had come to anticipate a vigorous demand for parity.

Instead, it was inferred by some officials and in editorial comment, the empire now is willing to forego partiy claims provided Japan is given a higher ratio and theoretical equality.

The new trends cropped out today as a high official source made known London likely will be notified within the next 24 hours of Japan's willingness to engage in discussions preliminary to the 1935 naval conference.

While making plans to accept Britain's invitation, officials made no secret of their eagerness to receive a like opportunity for preliminary talks at Washington.

In his suit Tomko alleges there was a flueless gas heater in the bathroom of the room his wife and daughter occupied.

Bank Messenger Robbed by Bandits

PHILADELPHIA, May 26.—(AP.)—Two men held up a messenger of the Philadelphia National Bank last night as he was returning from the postoffice, took $25 from his pockets, grabbed the sack of mail he was carrying, and fled.

Postal officials, after a later checkup, said the mail contained nothing of value to the robbers.

Dillinger, Capone, Insull Named On Ballots

Here is Crime's slate for the fall elections:

Dillinger for Governor!

Al Capone for Secretary of Internal affairs!

Machine-Gun Kelly for United States Senator!

Two-Gun Crowley for Congress!

Samuel Insull for Superior Court Judge!

These names have been found written in on the ballots of the Third District, North Fayette Township, as the return board canvasses the vote.

So far, 540 districts have been canvassed.

BRITISH DENY DILLINGER HUNT

LONDON, May 26.—(AP.)—Scotland Yard took official notice today of reports that it was searching for John Dillinger, American bad man.

Its notice was a flat denial, which said:

"The report which appeared in a morning newspaper today saying Dillinger is in London is entirely without foundation. No search has been carried out and none is contemplated."

The official statement was made after the Daily Mail had declared that a man who knew Dillinger "well" in the United States had given Scotland Yard a statement saying he saw the criminal in London two days ago.

EAST CHICAGO, Ind., May 26.—(AP.)—Detectives combed the underworld haunts in this vicinity today for members of John Dillinger's gang, convinced that Dillinger gangsters were responsible for the killing of two East Chicago policemen Thursday night.

Three men were held for questioning at Indiana Harbor, after police found two rifles and a shotgun in the roadhouse in which they were arrested near East Gary, Ind. The place, police said, had the reputation of being a Dillinger rendezvous. Authorities said they were certain the slayers were or had been hiding in the vicinity.

WOMAN, 109, OPERATED ON

Mrs. Henrietta White, Negro, of 273 Kirkpatrick street, who claims to be 109 years old, today was recovering in Passavant Hospital from amputation of her right leg.

If the records of the woman's birth are accurate, she is the oldest woman in the known history of surgery to undergo successfully a major operation.

Dr. Charles M. Watson performed the operation Wednesday. Hospital authorities say she has made a rapid recovery and is in no danger.

Mrs. White was born on St. Simon Island, just off the coast of Brunswick, Ga. Her grandchildren claim to have seen the record in an old Bible.

She says she remembers when "Yankees" came to the island and freed the slaves there even before the Civil War was over.

Rival Union Clash Prevents Banquet

NEW PHILADELPHIA, O., May 26.—(AP.)—Six persons were bruised late yesterday when more than 1,000 union sympathizers harassed members of the Greer Steel Company Employes' Association of Dover and prevented a banquet and meeting of the association in a downtown assembly hall. The outbreak climaxed several months of ill feeling between union members and the members of the association.

Police halted several fist fights and escorted members of the company union to automobiles bearing them out of town.

Logan's Ferry Mine Workers on Strike

Protesting the refusal of company officials to dismiss a mine superintendent who, they claim, has been unjust to the workers, more than 500 miners of the Logan's Ferry mine of the Allegheny-Pittsburgh Coal Company, a subsidiary of the West Penn Power Company, today are on strike. Company officials at the mine and at the general office here would not comment on the situation. There was no disorder, police reported.

'GIN MARRIAGE' OF HEIRESS ANNULLED

Merry Bares Speakeasy Visit, Honeymoon Tragedy in Court

LOS ANGELES, May 26.—(AP.)—Merry Fahrney Pickering Van Eiszner, patent medicine heiress of Chicago, is single today and "very happy" about it.

Her marriage to Frank Van Eiszner, Chicago socialite and advertising man, was annulled at her request in an overtime court session last night.

She told the court that after drinking some liquor last November and going on an automobile ride she "came to" in a Chicago hospital to find she had been "divorced from one man, engaged to another and married to a third."

'SPOILED CHILD'

A lawyer for Van Eiszner, who contested the action, described her:

"A spoiled child who has had a number of love affairs and thinks she can walk into marriage and walk out of it."

Nevertheless, Superior Judge Leon Yankwich, annuling the marriage, said:

"It appears there was a greater degree of intoxication than was admitted by Mr. Van Eiszner or any of his witnesses.

"Marriage is a serious matter. I do not think the courts should lend their sanction to so-called 'gin marriages.'"

VISIT SPEAKEASY

Telling of the events preceding her marriage, Mrs. Van Eiszner said she had gone to a Chicago speakeasy with Van Eiszner, whom she had met after a five-year interval in their friendship. They were married in Aurora, Ill., and while returning to Chicago by automobile, an accident occurred in which Van Eiszner's brother, Donald, was killed. When she recovered consciousness she found herself in a hospital, the bride of Van Eiszner.

Mrs. Van Eiszner divorced Hugh Parker-Pickering last September 27 after two years of married life with the announced intention of marrying George di Giorgio, self-styled Italian count. She said she had planned to go to the Canal Zone to meet the deported Italian, when she suddenly found herself in a hospital married to another man.

CURIOUS STRIP BARROW GRAVE

DALLAS, Tex., May 26.—(AP.)—Clyde Champion Barrow, who robbed and killed in rovings that made him the Southwest's most feared badman, rested today beneath the rocky, hillside soil he trod as a boy.

His brother, Buck, killed by officers' bullets in an Iowa gun battle, is buried in the same plot.

Clyde was buried yesterday in the unpretentious old French cemetery. His aged mother, anguish in her tone, wailed as she peared through tear-drenched eyes at souvenir hunters who raced to his grave and snatched at floral offerings.

Barrow's crime playmate, redheaded Bonnie Parker, will not be buried before Sunday. Her body lay in the home she deserted for her game of hide-and-seek with the law that came to an end Wednesday. Her mother, Mrs. Emma Parker, said private funeral services would be held.

The Story of Jezebel — CHAPTER VI — Told in Pictures By DAN SMITH

It was in the eleventh year of the reign of Jehoram that Jehu was anointed to be king over Israel in his stead, and when she heard that he was coming Jezebel, the widow of Ahab, painted her face.

When she had done this and had finished tiring her hair, Jezebel looked out at a window, and as she saw Jehu entering in at the gate she called to him, saying, "Had Zimri peace, who slew his master?"

Then Jehu called up to the eunuchs at the window, "Throw her down." And they threw her down, and her blood was sprinkled on the wall and on the horses; and Jehu rode over her so that she was trodden upon.

But when Jehu ordered that she be buried as a king's daughter, they found little of her. And so was the prophecy of Elijah fulfilled, when he said: "In the portion of Jezreel shall dogs eat the flesh of Jezebel." (The End)

CHICAGO, May 26.—(AP.)—The National Broadcasting Company today said its radio team, "Amos and Andy," would be off the air for the greater part of the summer beginning about July 15 to enable the pair, Charles J. They said they planned to go to the north woods, where they would be out of earshot, if possible, of a radio.

Banqueting the Air's 'Speed King'

Former Gov. Fisher as president of the Chamber of Commerce, as host to Miss Richey, Pittsburgh girl flier, and Col. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., May 26.

To the Editor, the Sun-Telegraph:

If you haven't bought a poppy this morning as you read this, go right now and do so, the soldier boys in the hospitals make 'em and its for a great charity. The further we get in years away from the war, the less we think of it. But that's not theses fellows fault, they never thought so much of it even at the time.

Will Rogers.

A mother can come nearer saying the right, and most impressive thing, under any circumstances than all your great writers. The mother of the outlaw Parker girl, killed in Louisiana says:

"She won't be buried with "him," he took her from me in life, but I will take her from him in death, she is mine from on."

Yours, WILL.

BIG FEET FOIL 'HORSENAPER'

LOUISA, Ky., May 26.—(AP.)—The "horsenapers" who stole Prince for ransom forgot all about the big feet a percheron has and so Prince was back in Dr. R. C. Moore's barn last night.

The registered stallion was stolen for ransom Wednesday night and while his owner was mulling over the $250 demanded and his love for Prince, a farmer came to town and reported the "biggest hoss tracks I ever saw."

That was all Dr. Moore, veterinarian and former county judge, needed to know. He got together a posse of three including himself and trailed Prince's tracks all night. Realizing they were getting closer the posse crawled over a hill today 65 miles from here in Magoffin County and there was Prince right in the middle of the road, big feet and all. His abductor fled.

Notes About Radio Stars, Stations

By AIRCASTER

Young Fernando Lopez Contreras, son of the Venezuelan minister of War, Navy and Air, who was on the air with me Thursday evening, has a sense of humor.

Sipping a light supper with him that evening in the Urban room, I asked about his father's air forces—what types of planes they use, and how powerful their motors.

"Eet eesn't de horsepower wat counts een my country," he explained with a twinkle in his eye. "Eet's de revolutions per minute."

And I suggested that his country might adopt a national anthem—"Yes, We Have No Mananas."

* * *

The Ed Wynn programs fade out with next Tuesday night's frolic.

Until yesterday it had been understood that Wynn and his sponsors would desert the air permanently. The executives of the employing firm were undecided, but the more canny of their number were reluctant to relinquish the ideal Tuesday spot by failing to institute a renewal option in case they agreed to return next autumn.

Such an option was signed yesterday and the Wynn bill will fade only for a hiatus of 13 weeks, during which Ray Perkins and his Chicago show will occupy the 9:30 p. m. spotlight on WCAE.

At the end of the 13 weeks, Ed Wynn and Graham McNamee will be back with more nonsense and puns.

NIGHTINGALE

It's the unusual in broadcasting that the networks are turning to nowadays. Here are three instances of this tendency.

First on the list is found a radio duet sung by a bird in England and another bird in New York. Maybe they won't be singing exactly the same tune, but the idea is to pick up the song of the nightingale in England and blend it with the tune of an American canary.

This broadcast is slated for KDKA at 6:45 Tuesday evening.

GLOBE TROTTING

Hello, Ladies and Gentlemen:

We are still merrily chasing down Foster homestead clues to prove or disprove that Henry Ford has purchased the right Foster birthplace. Mayor McNair says "No;" Henry Ford, by his purchase, says "Yes."

Several calls have come in from old residents of Lawrenceville who say that as long as they remember their fathers or mothers have pointed out the cottage bought by Mr. Ford as the Foster birthplace.

Mrs. S. S. Reymer, Negley avenue, brought in an old volume written by Morrison Foster, brother of Stephen Foster and copyrighted in 1896. This volume, in the Reymer family possession for nearly 40 years, describes Foster's and (the writer's) birthplace and prints a picture of the homestead.

The place Mr. Ford bought doesn't look much like the picture in the book. Of course, many changes have been made to the white cottage since it was first erected by Col. Foster, father of Stephen.

The Foster family had money. Besides the boys in the family, three sisters were reared in the cottage. Considering the size and prosperity of the family it appears that the home would have to be large enough to accommodate quite a few people.

Considering also that it was always open house at the Fosters, I wonder if the place bought by Mr. Ford was big enough to warrant its being the Foster homestead.

S. J. Heimbuecher has given a valuable clue. He said his uncle, now 92, and residing in St. Louis, was married 70 years ago in the home next to the one bought by Mr. Ford, and that the uncle would know.

He asked me to write his uncle but didn't enclose the name.

So let the controversy rage on. Keep the clues coming in and see if the Globe Trotter can't, to the complete satisfaction of everyone, locate the Foster birthplace.

Rushmore! Speed Up Texts

Tomorrow should be an important day to the thousands of men, women and youth preparing text inscriptions for the Mount Rushmore National Memorial competition.

Free from week-day tasks and duties, the entrants can take time to carefully complete their texts that must be rushed before the closing date of midnight, May 30. Every contestant must remember that all entries postmarked later than midnight, Memorial Day, will not be eligible for consideration of the Pittsburgh Rushmore Committee.

Too, tomorrow's Sunday Sun-Telegraph will publish the final hints on how texts must be prepared. Entrants will learn how words will be counted, what must form the basis of the 600-word text and "don'ts" which have been unheeded by scores of participants who already have submitted their entries. These mistakes would have been avoidable if contestants had followed the Sun-Telegraph daily for rules and hints as they had been advised. The pointers were repeatedly published.

New participants will have four days in which to enter the nation-wide competition being sponsored by the Hearst newspapers for Mount Rushmore National Memorial Commission. It will be sufficient time if untiring effort is bent towards studying the nine specific episodes of history that must be contained in the text.

All necessary information will be published. Every contestant is urged to submit the text before the closing hour.

Trade Recession Slightly More Than Seasonal

WASHINGTON, May 26.—The current warm weather business recession is slightly more than seasonable. The May decline will be about one or two points beyond the normal decline from April's to May's balk in 1923 to 1925.

That is more than had been expected, but not enough to worry about.

It is caused by several things. One is overstocking. For instance, textile production has been producing so much that the silk mills shut down by agreement for a whole week in May.

Another reason is sales resistance to some price increases. That factor is particularly noticeable in automobiles and building. After the automobile price increase, production was curtailed and so was the market. The sharp advance in building prices had a similar effect.

Also the tobacco manufacturers have been making more cigarets than people were smoking, and have been stopping a few machines.

ANALYSIS

None of these factors is particularly dangerous. They all are obviously temporary and self-adjusting.

In automobiles, manufacturers already are putting out models with fewer gadgets on them. These sell for about the same as the low-priced models before the price increase. Such shrewd tactics are bringing back the automobile market. When the small overstocking of silks and cigarets is absorbed, production will again have to be measured to demand in those lines.

There is one other factor which may not cure itself. That is the apparently dissatisfied mental attitude of a number of businessmen who are talking behind their hands. They probably are encouraged towards doubts by the trend in the stock market.

The adjournment of Congress will make them feel a lot better.

BUILDING

The only really disappointing factor in the business situation is building.

This industry was showing some signs of life until the price increases under the code came along and kept it from getting the improvement it deserved.

Construction contracts awarded in April amounted to $131,000,000, of which $58,000,000 was public works construction. May will be about the same. March was much larger, with a total of $178,000,000, of which $72,000,000 was public works.

The public works figures do not include publicly financed projects, but only direct public building.

STATISTICS

Certain government economists tell this story on themselves. They say one of their group was riding across Montana on a train recently when he got into conversation with a sheep rancher.

The economist started estimating the number of sheep in herds they passed. The rancher was astounded at the accuracy of the estimates. When they passed a herd owned by the rancher, the exact number was rattled off by the economist. The rancher demanded to know how the economist did it. The conomist said:

"It's simple; I count their legs and divide by four."

Glances Into the Realms of Domesticity and Romance

By MARION BRUNOT

Wife With Job Should Consider Self Lucky

There are young wives in Pittsburgh who think they are having a hard time of it. Instead of sleeping late in the morning and having their coffee brought to them on a tray by a white-capped maid, they are compelled to be up bright and early, and off to a JOB.

MIND YOU, a JOB, and MARRIED! It's Serfdom, they insist. Married women shouldn't have to WORK. A husband should support his wife. Sure thing, he should. IF HE CAN.

Miss Brunot

But what if he can't. What if his job doesn't pay him enough. What if he hasn't any job to pay him at all.

Then, Jennie, Jane, or Mary, whatever your name chances to be, You're darned lucky to have a job of your own . . . you're darned lucky, anyway.

LIVE IN BEST ERA

You're a wife in the best season wives have ever lived. You're in step with the super-period of all wifehood.

We've even passed beyond the day of our mothers when women married to have an easy life. We're keeping pace with an era when the wife stands not only heart to heart with her man, but shoulder to shoulder as well.

The sweatshop is in its death throes. Child labor has gone... The wife isn't a chattel. She knows all about her husband's money . . . and her money . . . and their money. . .

Fannina W. Halle has written a book, "Women in Soviet Russia." And she doesn't make me a bit sorry for those Soviet women. For they're arm to arm, ploughshare to ploughshare with their men. They're equal in every way . . . Being a woman is no longer an excuse for anything . . . not even having a headache.

OLD RUSSIAN CUSTOMS

And yet this same Fannina W. Halle tells of the social condition of women in the sixteenth century in Russia.

Here is an excerpt:

If a wife refuses to obey and pays no attention to what her husband tells her it is advisable to beat her with a whip according to the measure of her guilt. And do not strike her right on the face or on the ear, be careful you do not strike her with the fist in the region of her heart.

But if her fault be very serious, and the matter not so simple, then strip off her shirt, seize her hands, and give her a sound beating . . . nicely and courteously, so as to eschew all anger.

That was a wife's life in Russia then . . . This was an ordinance.

And again:

A Russian woman would assume her husband's heart was full of love of her if he strikes and beats her.

IT'S DIFFERENT TODAY

Imagine such a state of affairs, sister, today . . . Imagine getting up to the sound of cuffs on your back, and going to sleep to the whine of the whip across your shoulders.

A job isn't so bad in comparison. A husband looking to the NRA for help, picks up a bit to the sound of such glimpses into the past.

Women didn't jump into the front seats of flivvers then, and spin down boulevards to comfy offices . . . Women didn't take a day off in the country, and brew their own tea or stir up their own cocktails . . . Women didn't bake biscuits all ready prepared. And buy bread in the bakery shop . . . Women didn't decide anything at all . . . Those decisions were up to the man.

Women weren't even allowed to cross the border line of Russia if they were single . . . Single women didn't even mingle in festivities . . . they stayed put in a division of the house called the terem. . . .

Not so bad, is it, sister, being here in 1934 . . . True, we've had a mean old depression . . . True, we've learned to do something else besides bite your finger nails. . . . True, we've found it hard to give up nice old-fashioned luxuries which belonged to the twenties of this century, and settle down to smaller apartments and less well filled larders. . . .

True, we have been all het up at John and Henry and Paul for not seeing our side of the argument when they said they had looked everywhere for work, and hadn't found it.

"If I were a MAN, I'd find something," we've said . . . And meant it.

NOT SPECIALISTS

And being a woman, you did find something. For women in America aren't specialists. We haven't been working out of doors long enough for that. We aren't expecting fat pay envelopes. We're too new on the job to anticipate too much.

But we're lucky, you and I. We can cross the border-line into ANYTHING AT ALL. And come back, if you please.

We can laugh at the buggy whip on the wall.

Beating a wife is an offense, instead of a necessary virtue.

An egg-beater is about the only kind of a beater a husband wields these times.

Yes, there's plenty of them learning to COOK.

MISS AMERICA SEES WASHINGTON, D. C.---No. 6

BY NELL BRINKLEY

© 1934, King Features Syndicate, Inc., Great Britain rights reserved.

When the Jims and the Jacks and the Bills meet a momentous day, such as TEA AT THE WHITE HOUSE, they simply get out the "good" double-breasted suit, the tie they love the best, the newly-cleaned hat, the new sox from the loving wife or girl friend, shine the best shoes and the hair—and go! If they are slightly alean toward more elegance and vanity, they devote an extra minute to the rightest gloves and the neglected stick. From then on the Jims and the Jacks and the Bills think not of their humble selves, except that they are certainly presentable.

Not so the demoiselles! My word, what a to-do! What twitters! And then begins a "follow the leader" to the exterior decorators. Hair must glisten; nails must sparkle; perhaps a darling new chapeau would not be amiss, or a slight but ducky frock. And the shoes? These that were new so lately have a useful look now, from seeing the sights. Oh, yes; oh, yes; new shoes!

In fact, a momentous affair shakes the routine of the dears to the very foundations. Sally grabs Sue, Sue clutches Sylvia, and they are off for practically a whole spring day in Washington of wear and tear. Perfectly ecstatic wear and tear! For they love it—to invite the Goddess of Decoration in Washington shops!

All because the little ole feminine heart palpitates to the melody of "I aim to please; I must be admired to be happy."

The next you hear, these three sweeties of mine will have something to tell you. They will all talk at once. Sue will wink her eyes rapidly like a humming-bird's wings. Sally will stutter like Roscoe Ates. Sylvia will be more calm, for Washington, D. C., is her home-town, and the great and the near-great of American politics often pass her by! —NELL BRINKLEY.

A Sequel to Heart of a Wife

Lillian Prevents Love Scene

It was but a few seconds after Hugh's abruptly unfinished comment upon closing his eyes that Lillian came from behind the curtains concealing Katherine's "kitchenette." I blessed the thoughtfulness which I knew must have prompted her reappearance. She has the ears of an Indian, and I was sure she had interpreted that unfinished sentence as I had, and knew that it would be highly embarrassing for me to "make conversation" in answer to Hugh's virtual declaration that he did not wish to close his eyes while he could look at me.

"There!" she said, "the water is over the gas flame. I shall know when it boils, but my culinary knowledge beyond that is shaky. You know the old proverb." She looked at me with her gamin grin, and I was glad to seize the chance she had given me to get back to normalcy.

"Long ago, the English learned that water would boil and the Spaniards learned that oil would fry, and neither race has learned anything about cooking since," I repeated.

MADGE GETS OFFER

"Exactly," Lillian retorted, "and it fits me, although I do think it's a base libel on both English and Spanish cooking. I have eaten the most delicious meals in both countries."

"So have I," Hugh agreed quickly, and I guessed that he was making conversation, too.

"But, as I said before," Lillian ran on, "the proverb fits me exactly, although I'd be a bit uneasy about the oil. However, Madge knows her cooking—water, oil, or what have you. So, darling, get busy and make Hugh and me a nice cup of whatever you find on Katrina's cupboard shelves."

"Oh, no!" Hugh expostulated. "You're—" But he broke the protest off, remembering, I fancied, that he had made none when Lillian proposed getting him something "hot and nourishing, and, she hoped, palatable."

I had risen at Lillian's suggestion, and was at the curtain when Hugh spoke, so I was able to ignore his protest as I entered the compact little domain which enables Katherine to be entirely independent of the household machinery whenever she wishes.

I knew very well what both Hugh and Lillian would like, and my father as well, when he should be released from his vigil over Lee Chow. And I did not forget myself when I measured coffee and prepared the beverage which in our household is consumed almost as freely as water.

When I came through the curtains again, bearing a tray with the pot of coffee, cream, sugar and tiny, toasted biscuit, butter and jam, Hugh sprang up and, crossing the room with what seemed to me one stride, took the tray from my hands.

"This is entirely too heavy for you," he said masterfully. "Why didn't you call me?"

"It would be too heavy for you," Lillian said caustically, "if you hold it much longer at that angle. Most of the stuff will be on the floor. Put it down here."

CHATTER AT MEAL

She had cleared a table with swift, deft movements as she was speaking, and Hugh, suddenly looking very stiff and martial, placed the try on the table with much the air of a junior officer entertaining general headquarters. I found my lips twitching at the thought that he needed only to click his heels and salute to make the illusion complete.

"Voila!" Lillian spread her hands in the little Gallic gesture which I conjecture she first acquired in her art student days in Paris. "Shall I pour?"

"Please!" I returned, with an answering smile, and in another minute we were discussing the impromptu meal.

"Shall we take a cup over to the chief?" Lillian asked.

"Better not now," Hugh decided. "He won't want to take any risk of rousing Lee Chow."

"Then we'll keep it hot for him," she said, rising and carrying the pot back to the kitchenette. "One cup apiece is enough for the rest of us any way."

She kept up a chatter about inconsequential things until we had finished and she had cleared away the empty cups. Then, after seeing that Hugh was comfortably installed in a big wing chair—he had refused to lie down again—she seated herself and looked at him brightly and said:

"Now dish us the real dope on what's doing."

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Cannot Live Without the Pancreas

A great deal is written about the tonsils, gall bladder and appedix. These organs are common seats of trouble and it is important for everybody to be familiar with the first signs of a disturbance in one of these organs.

Dr. Copeland

I venture to say that few persons are familiar with the pancreas, another vital organ of the body. In fact, I doubt if many know where it is located.

The pancrease is an important gland. It aids in the digestion of food. We cannot live without it. Inflammation of this gland leads to serious digestive disturbances and prevents the body from obtaining the necessary nourishment.

The pancreas is located in the abdomen, just beneath the liver. It extends from the left side to the right side of the body.

The pancreas secretes organic ferments called "enzymes." These substances digest certain foods. For example, the "lipase" secreted by the pancreas, digests fat, whereas "trypsin" digests protein and "amylase" digests starch.

The pancreas secretes another valuable substances called "insulin." The importance of this product has only been understood within the past decade. A deficiency of insulin leads to an inability of the body to properly burn and utilize sugar This is what happens in the victims of diabetes.

Unless this deficiency of insulin is corrected by diet or medication, the body accumulates an excess of sugar. This excess leads to distressing symptoms because of the overflow of sugar into the blood stream. Fortunately, this failure of ample secretion can often be corrected by restriction in the daily diet.

When dieting alone is not sufficient to correct this disorder, artificially preparede insulin can be injected into the body by means of hypodermic injections. Contrary to a common belief, these injections do not cure diabetes. They control the excess of sugar and help the body to burn its food.

Like other organs within the body, the pancreas is subject to inflammation, infection, cyst, abscess, tuberculosis, cancer and other disturbances. Modern surgery has so advanced that disturbances of this gland no longer baffle the profession. The surgeon is able actually to examine the gland and in suitable cases to apply curative surgical measures.

Of course, the pancreas conceals many secrets from the inquiring physician. Many diseases of the pancreas are still incurable, but it is hoped that eventually a cure will be found for all its ailments.

Contract Bridge :: HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Bidding a Grand Slam

When partner has made an Opening bid and the Responding Hand has six honor-tricks, including all the Aces, most Bridge players would be inclined to think that the other member of the partnership had chosen that particular moment to make a psychic Opening call. However, even doubting the solidity of your partner's Opening, the requirements of a good partnership are that you must make the best response available. I cannot blame the South player with the cards below for feeling doubtful of his partner's Opening bid, but even if his partner's bid was psychic, his response certainly was not the best one. The result was that the hand was played in the worst contract, even though that contract was a Small Slam.

North, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ K Q J 10 9 ♡ Q J 10 ◇ K 10 ♣ K J 9
♠ 3 2 ♡ 8 6 5 4 3 ◇ 8 5 4 2 ♣ 8 7	North West East South	♠ 8 7 6 5 4 ♡ 2 ◇ 7 6 3 ♣ 6 5 3 2
	♠ A ♡ A K 9 7 ◇ A Q J 9 ♣ A Q 10 4

The actual bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠ (1)	Pass	4 N T (2)	Pass
5 ♠ (3)	Pass	6 ♡ (4)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—A sound Opening bid.

2—There is no need to hurry, South has all the time in the world necessary to correctly portray his power-house. The correct bid here would be three hearts.

3—Inasmuch as South had bid no suit, North has no option at this point but to rebid spades.

4—South for the first time bids his suit at the range of six.

The correct bidding of the hand would have been as follows:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 ◇	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	4 N T	Pass
5 ♠	Pass	7 N T	Pass
Pass	Pass

In view of North's Opening bid and his subsequent show of some additional strength by the bid of five spades over four no-trump and the support of the heart suit, South can count a practical certainty of thirteen tricks. The hand should be played at notrump, and not at a suit. As the hand actually was played at six hearts it was necessary to concede one trump trick to the West player. It is true that seven spades, seven diamonds or seven clubs can be made, but, as I stated before, notrump on this particular holding is the safest contract.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Circulation may not appeal to one as an interesting beauty subject, but we have to get down to beauty principles now and then.

Every woman needs enough exercise to keep her blood stream on the go. If she doesn't have it, the complexion is pale, texture of the skin poor. Hair thrives best when circulation is active; it lives on the capillaries of the scalp. Finger nails require it if they are to display good color. And, as beauty depends upon digestion, get exercise for thhe stomach's sake.

Superfluous hair on the legs produces a strange moire like pattern when chiffon hosiery is worn. The growth should be removed, or heavier hosiery worn. Doesn't look pretty.

Depilatories dissolve the hair at that point where it emerges from the skin. There are various forms of chemical fuzz removers. They do the work satisfactorily. Pop's old razor isn't a good idea, produces bristles. Anyhow, there will be trouble if he catches you. Men are very fussy about razors.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Rising to the Occasion?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman.

When meeting a woman who is older than one's self, for the first time, should the younger one rise? To stand or not to stand depending on the age of the person you are meeting is quite delicate. When should it be done so as not to offend anyone by making them feel old? I am 25 years of age. W.

You are right . . . this is a question that never seems to be solved. Every new introduction demands a quick thought and decision as to whether or not we should rise.

When a man is introduced to a woman, she definitely doesn't rise, unless the man is an elderly distinguished gentleman to whom she wishes to show special honor. When you are introduced to a woman of about your age, you needn't rise, although, of course, you may, if you wish.

But concerning this question of your rising when you are introduced to an older woman, only a superficial-minded woman would interpret this gracious compliment unattractively. If, when we rise to acknowledge an introduction, we make the other person "feel old," then there must be something the matter with our rising and with the manner and mood of our acknowledgment. If we have a fixed idea in our minds that this is the attitude that will be taken by the other person, then of course we bring about that attitude. But if our manner is an "accustomed" one, if we are gracious in the way we rise and the words we say in acknowledgment, then this is reflected and the other person realizes the compliment.

So, dear friend, cultivate your own graciousness of manner so that it will inevitably be correctly and charmingly interpreted and everyone whom you meet will say, "What a charming person she is . . . so well-bred and gracious!"

When it comes to chiffons and voiles and sheer materials of that sort you have to give very careful thought to your model—it can't be skimpy. And yet we don't want our clothes to do too much floating about now-a-days—at least those intended for the daytime. That is the reason this is such a good model for thin materials—it has something to it, but not too much. For instance, the collar coming over the shoulders like that is very becoming in a transparent texture. The bodice, too, is soft and flattering above the twice-pointed girdle — and the skirt has just enough ripple.

CHICKIE'S DAUGHTER :-: A Thrilling Serial Of Modern Romance :-: By ELEANORE MEHERIN

Helena, Ill, Asks Pippin Not to Take Hike

CHAPTER LXXX.

Pippin went up to the cabin. She got into hiking clothes. A strange dialogue went on in her mind; a faint, hot drumming in her heart.

"You can't make it there and back before dark. It's miles beyond Fallen Leaf. You know you can't make it."

"We can turn back anywhere. We don't have to go all the way."

"You ARE going all the way. You INTEND to go all the way."

She pulled a blouse over her head, reaching her arms slowly through her sleeves, her eyes closed and her thought swift. She saw the warm, urgent demand in Dale's eyes; felt his red sweet mouth meeting hers.

She yanked the blouse into place and with trembling hands, fastened her belt.

Helena stood at the door.

"Where are you going, Pippin?"

"Why you know, mother! We're hiking to Fallen Leaf."

"It's too late now! You should start at 6 in the morning."

Pippin looked indignantly into her mother's face:

"But you knew all about it. You knew Kate Stone, Blanche Woodman, Dale and I had planned this trip."

"I forgot it was today. Anyway, you're seeing entirely too much of Mr. Owens. I don't like it."

Pippin noticed that her mother's eyes were dilated and her cheeks flushed. She sank to the stool and said in a high strained, excited tone:

"I thought you liked Dale, mother. You said you did. You were glad when I went out with him."

Pippine Goes White

"I do like him. I was pleased to see you happy again. That's no reason you should spend the greater part of each day in his company!"

Pippin's lips went white. Helena had never been violent before.

She said weakly: "I don't see him alone very much, mother. Dadee and Irene or Kate Stone or Bruce are usually along. Why are you talking like this?"

Chickie's mood shifted abruptly: "I wish you had told me in time. I'd like to go with you. Couldn't you put it off until next week? Then I'll go, too. I've never taken that trail."

"Its' all arranged for today, mother. We can do it again next week. Do you think you can walk such a distance?"

"I can walk as well as you can! I'm stronger! How is it Dadee and Irene are not included?"

"They're going to that party at the Wilson's."

"And I'll be left alone? Both of you flying over the country! There's no need of this nonsenses! I don't want you to go . . . I want you here!"

Pippin looked at her mother with tremulous accusation.

"I never knew you to mind being alone before. It's too late for me to back out now. I've promised to go. Why are you so irritable?"

Pippin sat on the stool before the pine shelf that served as a dressing table. She blinked and tried not to cry.

Then Chickie came over with a pale, beseeching smile.

Helena Uneasy

"I didn't mean to make you unhappy, Pippin. Of course, you told me you were going. You're camping over night—isn't that the plan?"

When her mother said this, Pippin turned her back.

"It was the plan. Now we've decided to return. Sometime tonight."

"Oh—returning in the dark!"

"Before dark. It's an open trail."

"I feel uneasy. I don't know why. I wish you were staying home today!"

Pippin noticed that her mother's hair was parted on the side. It showed silver through the fading gold; there were deep shadows under the eyes and that wistful droop all about her. Pippin couldn't bear to see her mother daunted, or the slightest age in Chickie's face.

She said, almost in tears: "I never knew you to act so queer, mother."

"I know. I'm foolish. I dreamed about you. I saw you climbing Tamarack Mountain. You lost your footing. I saw you plunge down that terrible cliff. You made little faint cries. I saw you but I couldn't get to you—"

Pippin said faintly, filled with dread: "You don't believe in dreams, mother?"

"I don't know. It frightened me. I rarely dream."

Pippin went over to the basin and took a long drink of the icy mountain water. Her mother's emotion left her weak. She thought with a little sick tug at her heart: "What does Helena think? I shouldn't go. Perhaps I shouldn't go."

But she went over and kissed her mother goodby.

She said lightly: "We're not going to Tamarack, mother. And remember, I've been climbing these mountains a hundred years!"

Rushes to Helena

But she did not look in Helena's face.

She went hurrying and with a mind deliberately shut along the trail. She thought: "There's a wind blowing—I'm late."

It was a mile to that circle of trees above Dale's cabin. He would be impatient. He would think she wasn't coming.

She rested a moment against a crag. An image of Dale came before her, his dark thrilling face provoking again that warm, subtle, persuasive stir up to her cheeks, back to her heart.

She wished he would come along the trail, meeting her.

But she couldn't hurry. She couldn't get her mother's face out of her mind. She felt Helena's hand, Helena's eyes clinging with dark, beseeching plea to hers.

Foolish—a dream!

She had taken hikes before. Hundreds of times. This was a lovely trail. Some of the most beautiful views in all the glorious, uplifted mountains. They would stand by lonely Tamaracks and watch the yellow moon drop radiance on the water.

But what a strange dream—what strange, uprooting things her mother said!

She felt drawn as though a lasso tightened about her.

Suddenly she was shaking. A wild heat flew to her face. Helena was sick. Her mother was sick. And she had run away. She had left her alone.

She kept repeating this until she felt brittle with alarm. She dropped her bag and went quickly now—hurrying and stumbling along the trail—back to Helena's cabin.

Helena was sitting on a rock a few paces from their porch.

She wore hiking clothes. But she was stooped over. She looked exhausted.

When she saw Pippin, she got up. She caught Pippin's arm.

She said excitedly: "You didn't go! I'm SO glad."

Promises Not to Go

"I came back to get my leather coat."

"Well, you can't go! It's too late. I'm SO glad."

"Mother, are you sick? Where were you going?"

"I thought I'd follow. But it was too far. Come in. I'd like a cup of tea."

Helena's eyes had a fevered look. Her palms were very hot.

Pippin felt shaken. She felt fainting with fear. She led her mother to the living room. She sat down and put an arm about her.

"Helena—you didn't say you were sick."

"I'm all right now. But you won't go—I want to know that you won't go."

"Mother, you frighten me! I came back to see you. To know you're all right. I won't go. Of course I won't!"

The tears rushed down Pippin's cheeks.

Chickie said: "I think I'll go in and rest now. Tell Nellie to make me a little tea."

Pippin brought the tray. She sat on the couch while her mother drank it. She loitered about. She put cold cloths on her mother's head. Hours passed.

"Did you tell them you weren't going?"

"No—I didn't."

"Will they be waiting?"

"Yes—they will."

"I'm going to sleep now. Tell them, if you want. Hurry back. I want you to hurry back."

"I don't need to tell him!" Pippin thought, burning: "He knows! He knew all long!"

But she dashed with a withering swiftness, breathless over the narrow trail. The wind was high. Pebbles whipped across the immense granite slabs of the wild, volcanic country.

She came near the circle of trees. She thought with her heart emptied: "Helena is sick!" And waited for Dale to appear. She felt limp and leaned against a tree and found herself praying.

He was not there. He didn't come.

Spill Into Lake

She walked down the path which ran directly to his cabin. The path was shaded with trees.

Suddenly she heard voices. Dale's voice and a woman's. They spoke with anger.

A cold, clammy distress rushed over Pippin. With a little sick dread she came to a clearing. She saw Dale walk down to his pier. He carried a suitcase and was dressed as if for a trip.

Now the woman ran out and caught his arm. She was small and dark. She was Dale's wife. Pippin heard her high, shrill voice.

Dale motioned her back. She stood with her arms folded in a stubborn attitude.

He went to the edge of the pier and jumped into his boat.

Pippin thought: "It's so windy—it's too rough—he's going away—"

He unfastened the boat.

Just as the motor made a sharp tattoo, just as the boat shot from the pier, Dale's wife jumped in.

She stood up in the boat. She caught hold of his arm.

Pippin closed her eyes. She thought, frantic:

"She'll drown him. They'll capsize."

Pippin saw Dale's hand on the woman's shoulder, saw him try to sit her down.

The wind blew; the waters were rough. And those two grappling in the boat were like figures in a dark, frightening dream.

The woman's arms shot out, fighting him off.

"Look!" Pippin cried. "Oh, look!"

The next moment she was flying down the trail, tearing off her clothes as she went.

With the speed of thought the boat turned over. They were spilled into the rough, icy lake.

Fruit Tarts

When making tarts with very juicy fruit, put the sugar to be used for sweetening on a plate and mix a teaspoon of corn flour with each two tablespoons. Rub well together, then mix with the fruit in the usual way. The syrup will be richer, smoother and less likely to boil over.

DINNER GOWNS TO DO YOUR HOSTESS PROUD

By PRUNELLA WOOD

NEXT TO the luxury of dressing in your own home to receive guests is that of dressing for dinner in a neighboring penthouse. No battling with the elements need be taken into consideration for either rite, for reconstruction work on complexion or coiffure can be done in familiar privacy.

Also, it is in a friendly house that many a gown was built to shine, and not in the crowded public places where a blundered would as soon walk up your train as not, and where subtle colorings and designs are blasted by the Klieg of revelry.

* * *

IF IT REALLY is a penthouse for which one dresses to dine, a few tips on materials might not be amiss. A good dew can take the heart out of an organza or taffeta gown, just in the time it takes to down the coffee and liqueurs, and there is probably no woman so blase that she does not get her guest out onto her terrace in any weather short of a hurricane, once her garden boxes are planted and her furniture rescued from hibernation.

Another good choice for urban al fresco dining is the gown which has a tiny wrap of its own—something that will inconspicuously take the place of Grandmamma's shawl against sudden breezes. Many a tonsil has burst into indignant flame under the abuse of women who are a long way from the grandmother stage of life.

* * *

IT IS QUITE on the cards that the hostess these nights will wear a costume chosen especially to show off her interior decorations for the home, and it behooves the guest to get in step with this prediction for her own costume. It would be devastating to be the only person present in glittering toilette, or in the sole sample of the ubiquitous and smart cafe dinner suit. Her choice should be something soft and intimate that will complement the silver tissue coat or chiffon redingote that will greet her, though she may not wear her own home dinner costume. It's a fine point, maybe, but there is satisfaction and wordliness in it.

There is a lot of lobster red chiffon being worn just now, a sort of challenge to summer which takes because it is novel, and it's the truth that there's scarcely a home a woman can get into that would not offer a good back drop for a lovely, bright red dinner frock.

(Copyright, 1934, King Features Synd., Inc.)

The wrap on the dress below is three-quarters length, Chinese in spirit. It is navy blue net, lined with pink crepe. It has no fastenings.

The lighter frock sketched is an unusual printed chiffon, brown leaves of several shades on a white ground. The spiral train is a swell thing to drag across your hostess' handsome rugs or on her penthouse terrace. The puff sleeves are distinctly dinner-minded. The darker model is navy blue lace, with pink and blue grosgrain belt and straps which end in bows at the waist in back.

Household Hints

Keep medicines in a cool, dry, dark place. Light has a deteriorating effect on many medicines put up in solution form.

To prevent rust on a spring mattress, remove all dust with a small soft brush, then wipe each spring with a cloth dipped in olive oil.

Blankets which are new should be soaked for half an hour in water to which has been added one pound of bicarbonate of soda. Put them through a wringer. All the dressing will come out, and they may then be washed the usual way.

Local Motto Contest Winners On Tour of Nation's Capital

By J. JAMES MOORE, Pittsburgh Wing Commander

WASHINGTON, May 26.—Greetings from the capital city of the United States, birdmen.

Wouldn't you like to be Dorothy Smith, George Bish, Don Gross and John William Scott? You bet you would, for these four lucky Junior Birdmen arrived here last night on a fast train of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and are now on a three-day tour of the dozens of points of interest in the city.

They were the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Wing winners in our recent motto contest in which hundreds of you members competed. I wish that every one of you were along with us on this thrilling trip. These four winners, you can take my word for it, are having the grandest time of their entire lives.

Your chance, however, for a good time is coming! Our first annual Sun-Telegraph wing field day will be held at the City-County Airport Saturday, June 9. Then comes our Mobel plane derby at Schenley Oval on Saturday, July 7. The winner of the derby is going to get a trip to Washington also.

Visit to White House

The first stop on our itinerary today is the White House where we expect to meet Mrs. Roosevelt. She has promised to meet the birdmen if she does not have any pressing engagements. After that we will go through the Capitol and government buildings.

This afternoon we are going to go to the top of the Washington Monument and then go to the top of the Smithsonian Institution to see Lindbergh's famous plane "We." If time permits we will go to Bowling Field to go through the army hangars.

Tomorrow we will take an early sightseeing trip in the morning through the city of Washington with an official city guide who will point out to them many government buildings which we did not have time to visit this afternoon.

They include the homes of ex-Presidents, embassies and legations of the foreign countries, famous monuments, parks and statutes that make Washington one of the most beautiful cities in the world, the Booth Theater, where Abraham Lincoln was assassinated, and other interesting and historical points about the city and its suburbs.

After lunch we will make the delightful trip to Mt. Vernon, Washington's ancestral home, and visit the tomb of our nation's first President.

On our return we will stop off at historic Arlington National Cemetery, where we will pay our respect at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and visit the Memorial Amphitheater, the home of Gen. Robert Lee Custer, the masthead of the battleship Maine and graves of hundreds of war heroes and thousands upon thousands of soldiers who died in the many battles of this country.

While in Washington we are staying at the fashionable Lee House, which has every convenience to meet our comfort. I'll tell you more about what Dorothy, George, Don and John have been doing and the many places they have visited on Monday.

Our Honorary Members

The Junior Birdmen column for tomorrow will come from the national headquarters in New York. It will tell you about the first two honorary members of your organization. Their names are familiar to every person in the United States. One of them is a famous war ace. Look for the story in the Sunday Sun-Telegraph.

The next lesson in your model builders' course will appear Tuesday.

It will tell you about your first model plane—a baby all-balsa glider.

Happy Landing!

-:- JUNIOR PATROL MAIL BOX -:-

There are many lonely places, fellows!

To all of us who live in a city and state inhabited by many people, it seems it would be hard to be alone.

There is always somebody near us—within our call or hearing — almost all the time.

And this is as it should be—mostly. There is something in humans that makes them like to be with other people. We don't understand persons like hermits, for we wouldn't want to live alone ourselves.

In jails, you know, for prisoners who are bad they have punishment cells. In them, a prisoner is all alone—no one to talk to, no one to see or hear. He is in solitary confinement, they say.

In fact, it is said that one of the reasons why people live in cities is because they like to be in a crowd much of the time. They like to "rub elbows" with other people.

But there are times, fellows, when a fellow can work better alone. Sometimes you have a problem to solve. If other people are around you, urging you to come out to play, it's hard for you to get the work done, isn't it?

Another thing, if you are never happy alone you would find it hard to live in many places on earth. There are still many, many places—the wide oceans, great deserts, big mountains where the people are so scarce that you can walk miles and miles and never see another face.

Down at the South Pole now, Admiral Byrd is all alone, many miles from his friends, in a little hut alone in the ice reading his instruments. He is trying to find out more about the weather—but he has to be alone to do it.

Often, no matter what you do, you will be in a battle that only you can fight—alone. You will have to make a decision to go or stay, or to do this or not to do it. A fellow has to do those things mostly by himself.

Federation Sessions End

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., May 26.—(AP.)—After including material for and against birth control, equal rights and old age pensions in its study program, the council of the General Federation of Women's Clubs ended its sixteenth meeting today with a round of entertainment.

The council discussed those public questions for the first time at this meeting, which lasted throughout the week.

Aside from hearing reports of various departments and addresses by nationally known speakers, the council endorsed the Copeland food and drug bill and scored the House Ways and Means Committee for removing sections of the firearms measure before Congress, which would have regulated the sale of pistols and revolvers.

It also endorsed the investigation of profits made by munitions manufacturers provided by the Nye-Brandenburg resolution. The council went on record as opposing return of the saloon and recommended teaching of temperance in public schools.

Mrs. Richard M. McClure, of Chicago, motion picture chairman of the Federation, in her report urged members of the organization to demand "clean, wholesome film entertainment and oppose controversial story material."

Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, of Tulsa, Okla., now first vice president of the Federation, and Dr. Josephine L. Peirce of Lima, O., second vice president, will be candidates for the presidency next year to succeed Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, of Brockton, Mass.

Mrs. Sadie Orr Dunbar, Portland, Ore., now recording secretary, is unopposed for first vice president. Mrs. Walter W. Seymour, Chicago; Mrs. Walter S. Comly, Port Chester, N. Y., and Mrs. Albert E. Jones, Lisbon, N. D., are seeking the office of second vice president.

For recording secretary the candidates are Mrs. Arch Trawick, Nashville, Tenn.; Mrs. J. L. B. Buck, Richmond, Va., Mrs. John S. Harvey, Huntington, W. Va.; for treasurer, Mrs. Lafelle Dickinson, Keene, N. H.; Mrs. Laura W. McMullen, Montpelier, Vt.

Particular stress will be given during the next year to Indian welfare, with the department observing legislation now pending before Congress.

Banner Year At Congress Closes

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

After hearing the reports presented yesterday at the annual meeting of the Congress of Clubs one feels the organization is to be congratulated not only upon the condition of its affairs, but upon the amount and quality of work it has accomplished during the year just closing.

Mrs. R. W. Johnston, reporting the vast amount of territory covered by the Current Events Class, said she believed such an interest is an antidote for growing old. In her report for the speaker's bureau Miss Helen Grimes recommended that Stephen C. Foster programs be held, with contributions for the Foster Memorial Scholarship. She also recommended that a training class for speakers be formed and that retiring club presidents join the bureau.

The drama department, according to its chairman, Mrs. Chester P. Johnson, closed its year with a balance of $105 in the treasury. The permanent committee for loan scholarships, which started 12 years ago with $2.60, now has a working fund of $8,000. From this seven students were given assistance this year. Two loans have been paid in full this month, Mrs. J. F. Kirkpatrick, the chairman, reported. Moreover, the committee has held no benefit since 1931.

A long list of civic interests and activities was mentioned in the report of the recording secretary, Mrs. Robert T. Alexander, who also commented on the fact that Mrs. Oliver J. Haller, Congress president, has been absent from but one meeting during the year and that was because of a broadcast. Mrs. Alexander herself had been absent but twice.

In the morning J. Roland Brady, executive secretary of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board, spoke on "Housing Pittsburgh's Unemployed." H. S. Metcalfe, talking on "A Design for Living," was the afternoon speaker and there was an especially brilliant musical program by Miss Sara Jamison Logan, contralto, and Mrs. Guido Stempel, Jr., piano, apropos of which Miss Matilda Orr Hays begged permission to give the audience a deserved reprimand for its inattention.

In memory of the 10 Congress members who passed out of this world during the year, Mrs. Marie Tello Phillips Yeagle conducted a short service, reading her own poem, "Wings With the Dawn."

The nominating committee's ticket was elected as presented and the proposed amendment to the by-laws calling for the formation of a junior section was unanimously adopted.

Hazel Snodgrass Returning Home

Miss Hazel Snodgrass, of Cathedral Mansions, formerly of Bellevue, returns this week from Glendale, Cal., where she has been since November 1. She has won several golf tournaments at the Oakmont Country Club in Glendale.

Miss Alice Ferber To Wed on June 10

Miss Alice Ferber, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Ferber, of Wightman street, has chosen Sunday, June 10, as the date for her marriage to William Keizler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Keizler, of Munhall. The ceremony will take place in the Ferber home, with Rabbi Goodman A. Rose officiating, in the presence of the families.

Benefit Planned By Calverly Castle

Calverly Castle No. 101 has planned a benefit card and bingo party for Monday evening in the home of Mrs. Mabel Bain, Walnut street, East End.

Human Side of the News

Harry F. Guggenheim's New Book About Cuba Is a Study of Social and Political Problems

By Edwin C. Hill

ONE never quite knows about fair Cuba. Latest reports from Havana and the Pearl of the Antilles generally suggest a new stability and security under the Mendieta administration. Tourist agencies and steamship companies report that spring business was excellent, and even Will Taylor, manager of the Hotel Nacional, gazing sadly at the scars and abrasions which testify to the machine gun and artillery fire directed against his famous hostelry that time the Cuban army officers held it as a fort, sees happier times in the future.

Let us hope so. Especially after reading Harry F. Guggenheim's "The United States and Cuba," just off the presses of the MacMillan Company. Mr. Guggenheim, of the celebrated copper Guggenheims, was Ambassador to our Caribbean stepchild for four years, through all the bloody, violent years of the Machado reign of terror. But it is not of these savage years that he writes in his most excellent study of Cuban social, economical and political conditions.

* * *

South Favored Annexing Cuba

HE begins at the beginning, in the days when the Spaniards still ruled and slavery was an institution; back to the days, indeed, when there was tremendous agitation in the United States for and against enrolling Cuba as a state of the American Union. The slave-holding South was hotly in favor of it as an addition of so much more slave territory with its incidental representation in Congress. The North, generally, was much opposed. There were years of intrigues and some very fantastic diplomacy, but in the end, of course, the proposal came to nothing.

Then Mr. Guggenheim reviews the successive struggles for liberty against the waning power of Spain, and presents the philosophical as well as the historical side. He takes us through the exciting days of the mysterious sinking of the battleship Maine, and the resulting war and American occupation. And throughout the pages is an exposition of the Cuban mind and character, such a picture of the Cuban countryside and urban centers as this writer has not come upon in recent times, at least.

Harry Guggenheim writes as an understanding, sincere friend of Cuba. He sees Cuba gouged and crippled by the exactions of certain American interests, notably the beet-sugar people and the Louisiana cane-sugar growers. He makes it pretty plain that we have treated Cuba like a stepchild, indeed. No one can read the book without acquiring a pretty satisfactory knowledge and comprehension of the country which has caused more concern to our Presidents and State Departments for the past 50 years than any country in the world, not excepting Mexico.

Why should so small and lovely an island cause such agitation? Here is a land by nature peaceful and fertile. At times it has been rich, with a foreign trade of over a billion dollars. More often it has been poor, with a trade of less than one hundred millions. At times there has been gayety and contentment. More often there has been bitterness and desperate rebellion. Whichever way the wind blew the United States was affected. What is the reason for this strange relationship? The book answers the question.

For the book, as Mr. Guggenheim explains in a brief preface, is a review of United States relations with Cuba. It is a study of the effects of the Platt Amendment which has governed these relations since 1902, and makes definite recommendations to modify the treaty in which the amendment is incorporated. One gets the "feel" of Cuba from this book.

As witness: "Months of travel over a country's surface fail to give the vivid general impression that is presented by a survey from the air. The first impression of Cuba from an airplane is that of a country of stately royal palms, with graceful green crests beautifying every panorama; then that of a vast fertile plain set out in yellow patches of sugar cane which wave and glisten under a sun blazing from a very clear blue and white sky. But this impression must be later altered to include the mountain ranges, covered with dense forests of superb hardwood and running cascade brooks, and the sandy and marshy low lands, and great, freshwater swamps, haunts of the crocodile and the wild fowl."

Three Crops Of Potatoes

NATURE is both bountiful and cruel to Cuba, as Mr. Guggenheim writes. The country abounds in bird and reptile life, with the venomous snake unknown, and is noticeably lacking in wild mammalia. The shore waters and estuaries harbor quantities of various highly colored fishes, molluscs and crustaceans, and also the curious manatee or sea cow, which suckles its young.

The tropical heat and humidity provide an abundance of alimentary plants and delicious fruits. As many as three crops of potatoes, for example, can be harvested in a year, and some nutritious vegetables ripen within 30 days after the sowing of the seeds. Bananas grow year after year from the same root stock with little or no cultivation. The royal palm provides all materials needed for a bohio—the countrymen's hut of Indian origin. The tree's trunk provides wood for siding, and its leaves, thatch for roofing.

In the warm Cuban climate man requires little clothing and no fuel for heating. The winter climate of Cuba is delightful. From November to April is the so-called "dry season;" but during these months, unlike the continuous dry spells of many countries, there are some rainy days to break the monotony and to water a soil already moistened by heavy early morning dews.

In the summer the Cuban night always brings refreshment from the burning sun; the narrow island is then swept by breezes from the sea, filling the soft air with perfume of flowers and moist earth.

LITTLE WINS, 14-13, IN BRITISH AMATEUR FINAL

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Loss of Lindstrom Blow.
Tough Schedule Faced.
Bucs Honored by Giants.
Grimes Seen as Helpful.
Deal for Ferrell Gamble.
Judging at Horse Show.

The loss of Freddie Lindstrom's services is a particularly hard blow to the Pirates at this time because the club is entering one of the toughest parts of its entire schedule. After three games with the Giants in New York, the Bucs must make a long jump to Chicago for three tilts with the Cubs, to be followed by four meetings here with the Cardinals. That makes 10 battles in a row, and six of them away from home, with the three other first-division clubs and pennant contenders.

Freddie Lindstrom

Immediately afterward, the Pirates will go to Cincinnati for four bouts with the Reds and thence to St. Louis for three more with the Cards, so that of the Gibson gang's next 17 games, 13 will be against first-division clubs and flag rivals, and all but four of the 17 contests will be played on the road. One or two easier things could be imagined than getting through that period without a loss of ground, even if the Picaroons were at their full strength all the way. The club is fortunate in having such capable outfield reserves as Wally Roettger and Woody Jensen in the emergency, but neither can be expected to equal Lindstrom in the latter's recent brilliant all-around form.

GIANTS PAY NEAT TRIBUTE TO PIRATES

Local baseball fans and Pittsburghers in general join with the officials of the Pittsburgh club in expressing their appreciation of the honor conferred on this city and its team by the owners of the New York Giants in selecting for the raising of the world championship flag at the Polo Grounds a date on which the Pirate team is the visiting attraction there. The New York club paid Pittsburgh a neat compliment in selecting today, the Buccaneers' first playing date of the year in the metropolis, for the unfurling of the emblem of world baseball supremacy.

The Giants were privileged to pick any day they desired for the notable occasion, and had their choice of seven clubs in the National League to assist in the ceremonies. Moreover, every one of the other clubs has appeared in New York this year before the Pittsburgh team, and the action of the Giant officials in passing up all of them to await the coming of the Pirates is at once an acknowledgment of the strength, color and road popularity of the Bucs, and a tribute to the memory of the late Barney Dreyfuss, as well as to Mrs. Dreyfuss, and to the present energetic head of the Corsairs, President William E. Benswanger. In appreciation of the honor, Mrs. Dreyfuss and Mr. and Mrs. Benswanger made a special trip to New York last night to be present. Let's hope the Pirates can return the compliment next year by having the Giants as guests at a world flag raising at Forbes Field.

YANKEES URGED TO GIVE GRIMES CHANCE

One of the New York critics is urging the Yankees to sign Burleigh Grimes as a relief pitcher. It is admitted that Grimes, almost 41, is done as a starter, and perhaps could not go more than four innings in the American League, but the scribe contends that Burleigh stops rallies and that's the type of man Joe McCarthy could use. Grimes and George Uhle would represent a total of more than 75 years in the Yankee bullpen. It wouldn't be the first appearance of Grimes' name on an American League roster, as the Tigers had him in 1913, but shipped him to Chattanooga without a trial.

Clarence Mitchell

While the majors have been without a spitball pitcher since the Cardinals released Grimes, another of the old-timers is doing very well with the damp fling in the minors. Clarence Mitchell, 43-year-old southpaw, had to remain idle last season, but got a chance with the San Francisco Missions this year when the Pacific Coast League revoked its ruling against allowing any new spitters to operate, and so far he has been one of the most effective hurlers in the loop.

FERRELL GOES TO RED SOX AS GAMBLE

Whether the Red Sox got anything more than the novelty of having the only brother battery in the majors in obtaining Wes Ferrell from the Indians is something for the future to determine. As the result of an ailing arm, the once great pitcher was able to win only 11 games last year after scoring 91 victories in four straight seasons, and the Boston owners are merely gambling on his recovery.

In the same deal, however, the Boston acquired a good outfielder in Dick Porter, always a .300 hitter until the big park occupied by the Cleveland club last year pulled him down to .267. And they didn't give up much that will be missed in the way of playing material, as Outfielder Bob Seeds was not being used and Pitcher Bob Weiland is just an ordinary left-hander who won only one game for them this year while losing five.

CAPABLE JUDGES FOR JUNE HORSE SHOW

Judging, one of the most important factors of a horse show, will be capably handled again this year at the eleventh annual equine exhibit of the Allegheny Country Club, to be held June 7, 8 and 9 at Sewickley. Nationally-known men and women will be in the center of the ring to select the ribbon and trophy winners in the various classes, which, incidentally, have been increased this year to include trotters and polo ponies. Mrs. John Gerken, of Brooklyn, who is seen at all the shows throughout the East, will pass judgment on harness horses and ponies. Earl S. Pemberton, of Bowling Green, Ky., will act in the three and five-gaited saddle horse and saddle pony classes.

W. C. Robinson, Jr.

Murray P. Fleming, of Toronto, Ont., and Dr. A. C. Randolph, of Bluemont, Va., will judge the hunters and jumpers. George R. McNary, of Greensburg, will preside over the polo pony division, and Thomas W. Clark, of Edgemont, Pa., will act in the farm horse class.

W. C. Robinson, Jr., of Sewickley, chairman of this year's executive committee, says the entries and reservations of boxes and parking space indicate new records both in number of participants and in point of attendance.

While she has not announced all of the animals she will show, Mrs. W. P. Roth, of Woodside, Cal., has notified the local committee that she will present several of her famous horses, including the world champion, Sweetheart on Parade, and the acknowledged king of the ring, Chief of Longview.

NEW YORK, May 26.—The Pirates will be the party of the second part at the Polo Grounds this afternoon as the Giants raise their world series emblem to the four winds. The championship exercises will precede the first contest of a three-game series scheduled between the Buccos and Terrymen.

Many of baseball's dignitaries will be in attendance at the flag-flying festivities. Special honor guests for the occasion are Mrs. Barney Dreyfuss and Mrs. John McGraw. President Charles A. Stoneham, of the New York club, arranged their event as a testimonial to the memories of the late Pirate owner and the famous Giant leader, and the fact that their wives will be present will add a touch of sentiment to the setting.

FRENCH MAY HURL

Included among the visiting guests are Pirate President and Mrs. William E. Benswanger, who came over from Pittsburgh with Mrs. Dreyfuss last night. The Bucco prexy was given a big welcome by Manager Gibson and his players as he reached their hotel.

The Pirates were rained out at Boston yesterday. A few hours later they hopped a day train and were in the metropolis for a good night's sleep. Red Lucas was to have pitched the last game against the Braves, but Boss Gibson may switch to Larry French as the opening pitcher for the present series. French is eager to get into a starting stride, especially after having floored the Phillies for his first full-distance game. Joe Bowman is due for the Giants.

The Pirates have played eight games so far on their excursion, victory perching on their banners in half of these battles. They landed in New York on top of the heap, but the race among the first four clubs is so tight that almost anything can happen.

BUCS HOLD LEAD

To be exact, the Pirates in first place are only one full game ahead of the fourth-place Giants. Naturally the Bucs are eager to take two of the three contests scheduled at the Polo Grounds.

Leftfielder Fred Lindstrom is lost to the club for something like 10 days with a splintered finger on his left hand. Lindy came to New York with the club, but he will remain in Pittsburgh while the Pirates are fighting it out with the Cubs in Chicago in three games during the Memorial Day period.

Pilc Tough Foe For Anson Green

Anson Green will have a tough target for his blasting punches when he meets Johnny Pilc, of New York, in the 10-round main bout of the second show of the outdoor season at Hickey Park, Millvale, Monday night. Pilc has been hit by "experts" and is of the rugged type that "can take it." He is due here in time to work out in the Pittsburgh Lyceum gymnasium tomorrow afternoon.

Johnny Durso meets Harry Weekly in the six-round semi-final, and, in three five-round preliminaries, Al Quaill boxes Kid Barry, Ralph Gizzy takes on Johnny Birek and Carl Montebano tangles with Casey Rhodes.

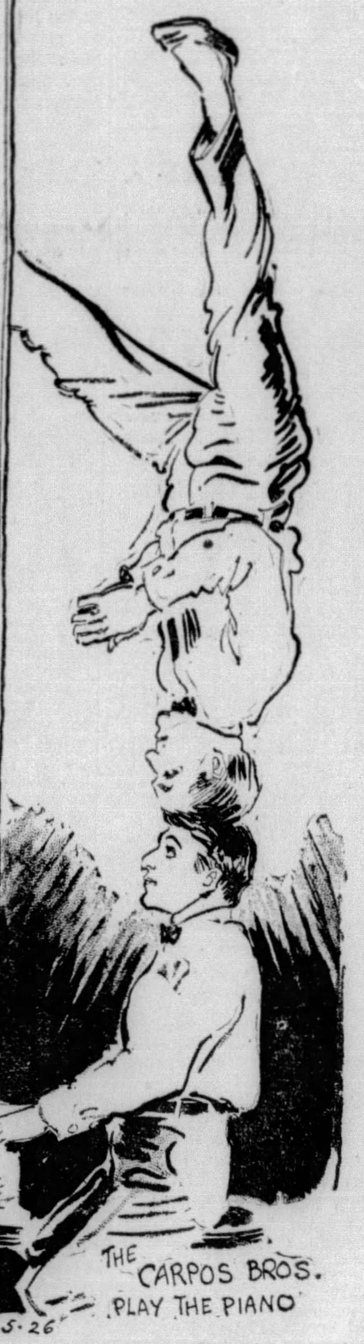
THE CARPOS BROS. PLAY THE PIANO

By Ripley



EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: A DIFFICULT GYM STUNT—Robert L. Jones, of Camden, N. J., an ardent gymnast, keeps up the most astounding repertoire of finger stands and finger dips that I have ever seen. A few years ago he surprised me by standing on his thumbs with body straight in the air, and since that time he has accomplished a thumb stand on top of dumbbells and bottles, hand stands on the tips of his fingers and a finger stand on his middle finger, as well as many other similar accomplishments. THE UNCROWNED QUEEN—Caroline, of Braunschweig-Wolftenbuttel (1768-1821), the daughter of a gay German duke, married George IV, of Great Britain, in 1794, when the latter still was Prince of Wales. Two years later the prince forsook his wife. She sailed for the continent and spent many years traveling. After the death of George III, Caroline returned to Great Britain, to be present at the coronation of her royal husband. She was refused admission to Westminster Abbey on July 19, 1821, this refusal being her death blow, from which she died on August 7.

TOMORROW: THE FATHER OF EUROPE.

U. S. GOLF ACE BREAKS FOUR RECORDS

PRESTWICK, Scotland, May 26.—(AP.)—W. Lawson Little, of California, defeated James Wallace, Scottish carpenter, 14 and 13, today for the British amateur golf championship, smashing all existing records for this classic tournament.

After gaining a 12-hole lead in the morning round by shooting a sensational 66 to break all records for this strenuous seaside course, Little quickly put an end to the one-sided match at the twenty-third hole with another display of sub-par golf. He was three under par for the five holes of the afternoon round and eight under par for the match.

In becoming the third native American to win the title—Jess Sweetser won in 1926 and Bobby Jones in 1930—the 23-year-old California husky set up four records. His margin of victory was the most one-sided ever registered; his lead of 12 holes after the first 18 was the largest any finalist ever enjoyed, and his first round 66 shattered the professional record of 69 held by MacDonald Smith, as well as the amateur standard of 71, set by F. Blackwell.

WALLACE HELPLESS

In the face of this sort of golf, Wallace, the "dark horse" sensation, never really had a chance. Wallace failed to display the same steady skillful game that he showed in eliminating George T. Dunlap, Jr., yesterday and four other Walker Cup players on previous rounds. But even if he had it wouldn't have helped him, what with his birdie on the third hole losing to Little's eagle.

As they left the course and the American hurried to pack his bags and leave for Liverpool to board the Laconia tonight, Little said:

"Sorry, old man."

The 30-year-old Scot replied:

"It was a grand experience to play against such a great golfer."

Little required only 36 putts for the 23 holes. The burly Pacific Coast star was 10 under 4s for that distance. While Little was three under par for the concluding five holes, Wallace himself was one under par. The cards:

Par, out	435	434	444—35
Little, out	433	433	544—33
Wallace, out	534	744	545—41
Par, in	435	444	444—36—71
Little, in	435	434	343—33—66
Wallace, in	546	544	443—39—80
Little, out	334	33
Wallace, out	434	43

LONG-RANGE DRIVING

One of the factors that worked heavily in Little's favor was his long-range driving. As in his semi-final match yesterday against Leslie Garnett, Little consistently belted the ball off the tees well over 240 yards. He drove to the edge of the green on the 288-yard sixteenth hole.

A tremendous, cheering crowd waited outside the clubhouse while Little changed his clothes for the presentation of the trophy, which he will keep for one year. Little said:

"The way I was playing I didn't want to quit. I never enjoyed a round so much in my life. I am the first player to come over here and win a major British title on the first trip."

The Marquis of Ailsa, acting in behalf of the Prince of Wales, made the formal presentation of the trophy, which Little is taking back to America personally, following the precedent established by Bobby Jones in 1930.

William Kennedy, chairman of the Prestwick Club, in presenting Little, said:

"His play today probably will go down as an all-time record. It was the most extraordinary display ever seen in Scotland. He's a magnificent golfer with no nerves. Wallace met a giant and fell nobly."

CLEVELAND INDIANS CLOSE ON HEELS OF N. Y. YANKEES

RED SOX LOSE SLUGFEST TO TRIBE STARS

Associated Press.

When they're all hitting, as they frequently have been lately, these Cleveland Indians can be a set of exceedingly tough customers for any American League rival.

By way of impressing that fact upon any remaining doubters, they ran up the second-highest score of the major league season yesterday, burying the Boston Red Sox, 18 to 3. The Indians beat them, 20-10, on April 30.

TEAM HITS HARD

The Redmen started by scalping Gordon (Dusty) Rhodes for five hits, including Joe Vosmik's tremendous homer, and five runs, in the first inning. Then they pounded Herb Pennock awhile, and when Henry Johnson took the hill in the fifth they met him with a seven-run outburst. By that time Manager Bucky Harris, of Boston, was ready to concede, so he let Johnson stay in while Cleveland went on to pile up 24 hits, the season's largest total, for 43 bases. Monte Pearson limited the Hose to seven hits.

While all this was going on, Chicago's White Sox caught the fever, landed on George Uhle for six runs in the third, when Manager Jimmy Dykes hit his fourth homer in eight games, and beat the Yankees, 7 to 5.

Washington checked the St. Louis winning streak by battering out a 9-to-3 victory and the Philadelphia's Athletics smacked out a 9-to-7 decision over Detroit. The Senatorial attack featured homers by Manager Joe Cronin, Johnny Stone and Buddy Meyer to back up Earl Whitehill's five-hit flinging. The A's made good use of a handful of walks and five Detroit errors to win out with a late spurt.

The combined effect of these four games was to send the standing into a snarl.

YANKS PRESSED

The Yankees found their lead reduced to a single game while the cellar dwelling White Sox were only six games off the pace. Washington, Detroit and St. Louis again joined in a triple tie for third with .500 averages while Boston sank into a sixth place deadlock with the Athletics.

The entire National League program yesterday was rained out.

SCHOOL NINES IN FINAL

It will be Burgettstown and Edgewood in the final game for the W. P. I. A. L. baseball championship at Forbes Field Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Edgewood advanced to the final round by defeating Crafton yesterday, 5 to 3, thanks to some effective mound work by Garbark, who fanned 13 Crafton batters and gave up only two hits.

Burgettstown slugged out a 12-to-4 victory over Waynesburg, getting 20 safe hits, five of which were recorded by Messeka, Burgettstown leadoff man.

In the City League yesterday, Oliver lost to Langley, 1 to 0 in a hard-fought battle; Allegheny Vocational walloped Carrick, 7 to 1 and South was shutout by Schenley, 14 to 0.

Connelley, Sewickley, Turtle Creek, Brentwood, Latrobe and Greensburg turned in victories in the Interscholastic Golf conference yesterday.

Connelley defeated Allegheny Vocational, 15 to 0; Sewickley won over Shady Side, 13½ to 1½; Turtle Creek took Dormont, 10½ to 4½; Brentwood downed Central Catholic, 9 to 6; Latrobe whipped Norwin, 10 to 5, and Greensburg nosed out McKeesport, 8½ to 6½.

The Conroy School team won the city grade school track and field title in the annual meet yesterday at Schenley Oval, piling up 50 points against 30 for Brookline, 28 for Dilworth and with Beechview scoring 25. Holmes 23, Forbes 17, Lemington 15, Morningside 13, Friendship 11, John Morrow 11, Garfield 8, Lee 7, Troy Hill 6, Greenfield 5, Letsche 5, Westlake 4, Mifflin 4, Park Place 3, Fort Pitt 3, Fulton 2, Obey 2, Regent Square 2, Logan 2, Linden, Spring Lane and Frick 1 each.

The Shady Side Academy track and field team scored 82 points to lead Perry and Carrick in a triangular meet at Shady Side yesterday. Perry counted 36½ points and Carrick landed 21½.

Honus Says:

By HONUS WAGNER
Former Star, Now Coach of Pirates.

To the Sports Editor:

I noticed one thing on this eastern trip and that is they have apparently stopped putting more skyscrapers in New York. That was a good souse the city went on during those years they built so many of those high buildings, and now they've sobered up. It got so bad once that you'd go to sleep in your hotel and there would be a big hole in the ground, and when you woke up the next morning there would be a skyscraper where the excavation was the night before. Somebody said an old saying had been changed to: "There's a broken heart for every skyscraper on Broadway!"

M'LARNIN MUST DROP WEIGHT

NEW YORK, May 26.—(AP.)—Mainly to save himself a fat check, Jimmy McLarnin toiled on at his Atlantic City training camp today in preparation for his welterweight title defense against Barney Ross Moday night.

A little older, a trifle slower, but hitting just as powerfully as ever, the pleasant-faced Celt already has rounded into perfect condition. But $10,000 in forfeit money depends upon his ability to make 145 pounds, two pounds under the welterweight limit, at noon Monday in accordance with a private agreement with Ross. That means Jimmy will get no real rest until after he has hopped on the scales.

For Ross the training period is over. The speedy lightweight champion from Chicago arrived in town last night from his camp at Ferndale, N. Y., and immediately installed himself and his entourage in a midtown hotel. He planned a brief drill in a gymnasium this afternoon, just enough work to keep him at razor-edge.

Meanwhile the temperature of John H. Fan was rising rapidly. He hasn't been so excited over the little fellows since Benny Leonards's heyday. Madison Square Garden officials announced the advance sale had crossed the $100,000 mark and reiterated their belief fully 70,000 would find their way into the garden's Long Island Bowl for the fight. With any sort of a break from the weather man they figured the "gate" would pass $250,000.

The betting odds remained at even money despite the belief of many well-informed critics that McLarnin would carry too much weight and hits too hard for Ross.

U. S. Tennis Stars Lose in France

PARIS, May 26.—(AP.)—Two more Americans fell before stinging foreign racquets yesterday in the third day of the French hard court tennis championships.

Josephine Cruickshank, fifth ranking American player, was put out in the second round by Joan Hartigan, the Australian woman champion, 1-6, 7-5, 8-3. Wilmer Hines, former North Carolina collegian, was defeated by Max Ellmer, Swiss Davis Cup player in the third round of men's singles 8-10, 6-4, 6-0, 5-7, 6-3.

Both Americans seemed on their way to victory when their games deserted them. Miss Cruickshank, especially, appeared to have the measure of Miss Hartigan as she led 6-1, 5-3, but she hit a streak of wildness from which she failed to recover in time. Hines was alternately brilliant and uncertain and in the end Ellmer's steadiness prevailed.

Uncle Sam still has strong competitors in women's singles, however, in Helen Jacobs, the American champion, Carolin Babcock, Sarah Palfrey and Dorothy Andrus.

Crawfords Meet Bachrachs Today

The Pittsburgh Crawfords and the Bachrach Giants open a series at Greenlee Field this afternoon. A single game is scheduled today, a doubleheader tomorrow and the final game on Monday.

Parmelee and Beltzhoover scored victories in the City League yesterday. Parmelee defeated Mt. Oliver, 7 to 6, while Beltzhoover vanquished the Vaughans, 7-0.

Dormont defeated Sewickley in an independent game, 10-3; the Methodists beat the Presbyterians in the Crafton-Ingram Church League, 5-4; the Ottie Cochrans beat Bellevue, 6-2, and Whitaker slammed out a 16-5 triumph over Homewood.

Sport Shorts

Golfers of the tri-state district today headed for the Oakland Beach Golf Club, Conneaut Lake, to compete in the pro-amateur and open tournaments carded there tomorrow and Monday.

The Schenley Matinee Club will stage its inaugural meeting of the season at the Schenley Oval Decoration Day.

The Wash-Jeff tennis team defeated Bethany College in a match at Washington, Pa., yesterday, 5 to 4.

STARS BATTLE IN I. C. A. A. A. A. FINALS TODAY

PHILADELPHIA, May 26.—(AP.)—Leaving behind them a trail of upsets and misfortunes, churned up by the rain and mud of the qualifying competition on Franklin Field, surviving stars of the East and Far West were assured better conditions today for the finals of the fifty-eighth Intercollegiate A. A. A. A. track and field championships, featuring a four-cornered battle for the team title forfeited by Southern California.

Powerful "blowers" dried out the track and prospects brightened for a series of brilliant individual duels, including Bill Bonthron's 1,500-meter race with Gene Venzke, of Pennsylvania, and the Tigre star's bid for his second straight "double" in the 800.

STANFORD STRONG

Stanford and the University of California figured to run one-two again for the Pacific Coast, but not without a struggle from Yale and Harvard.

Despite the failure of their crack sophomore, Sam Klopstock, to qualify in the 110-meter high hurdles, Stanford's seven-man team appeared to have the foundation for victory laid with 19 points "in the bank," thanks to the brawny skill of specialists in the shotput, discus and javelin.

A come-back by Klopstock in the 220-meter low hurdles, together with fast work by Allan Blackman in the 200 or 400-meter races, or both, and a place for Ben Deacon in the pole vault would mean 10 or 12 more points for Stanford.

California's small band flashed through the qualifying mud with such a show of strength that the Golden Bears looked to have an excellent chance to carry off five of the 15 individual titles, which would mean 25 points and a real threat to Stanford.

Yale suffered disappointment in the hammer throw, where only one of her stars, Hillman Holcombe, qualified. Yale's hopes hinged on three pole-vaulters, headed by Keith Brown, and a comeback by the two Eli low hurdlers, Pierson and Dunbar, who were hard pressed to qualify.

Harvard, picking up 10 qualifying places and leading the entire field yesterday, showed impressive strength.

PITT PLACES FOUR

One defending champion, Capt. Dick Hardy, of Cornell, qualified for the final in the 100-meter dash only as the result of an official reversal of the judges' decision late last night, while another titleholder, Henry Little, of William and Mary, was outdistanced in the broad jump.

A total of 27 colleges and universities qualified 90 athletes in 11 events, distributed as follows:

Harvard, 10; Stanford, 8; Yale, 7; California and Princeton, 6 each; New York University, Cornell and Pennsylvania, 5 each; Dartmouth and Pittsburgh, 4 each; William and Mary, Manhattan, Bowdoin and Columbia, 3 each; Michigan State, Boston College, Northeastern, Fordham and Maine, 2 each; Williams, Rhode Island, Swarthmore, Syracuse, M. I. T., West Virginia, Holy Cross and Penn State, 1 each.

FERRELL GOES TO RED SOX

CLEVELAND, May 26.—(AP.)—"The batteries for today's game: For Boston—Ferrell and Ferrell."

The ump's call, significant of the first brother battery the major leagues have seen in years' may soon ring through the parks of the American League.

Wes Ferrell, Cleveland's boy "hero" of 1929 who in his first four years of major league experience established himself as the first pitcher in history to win 20 or more games each season, has become the property of the Boston Red Sox, where his brother, Rick, does the backstopping.

A holdout, as usual, this year, Wes Ferrell went on the voluntary retired list rather than accept a contract offered by the Indians. His suspension was listed when General Manager Billy Evans completed a deal with Thomas Yawkey, of Boston, for a trade of Ferrell and outfielder Dick Porter for Pitcher Bob Weiland and Outfielder Bob Seeds of Boston and a cash sum said to be in excess of $25,000.

Allegheny, St. Clair Golf Teams Lead

The women's golf teams from Allegheny and St. Clair Country Clubs are at the top of the standing in the Women's Team League of Western Pennsylvania today, following yesterday's matches, in which Section I played at Westmoreland and Section II battled at Highland.

In Section I Oakmont defeated Stanton Heights, 6 to 0; the Field Club won over Fox Chapel, 4 to 2; Allegheny downed Edgewood, 4 to 2, and Westmoreland and Butler tied, 3 to 3.

In Section II, St. Clair downed Sunnehanna, 5 to 1; Shannopin tripped Longue Vue, 4 to 2, and South Hills defeated the Country Club of Pittsburgh, 4 to 2.

SCHOOL TENNIS TEAMS GAIN TITLE FINAL

The champion Mount Lebanon squad of Coach V. M. Doak yesterday copped the right to encounter on Pitt's Trees Field courts Monday the crack Shady Side Academy array in final of the intersectional playoff series for the Interscholastic Tennis Conference title and the University of Pittsburgh Placque, symbolic thereof. The Lebanonians, minus their rangy ace, Ralph Bald, the junior premier of Western Pennsylvania, edged out Taylor Allderdice High School, winner of the city crown, to annex the opportunity. The decision read 3-2 and the scene of combat was the Shady Side lot out Fox Chapel way, the contest having been shifted thither from the Panther rectangle after rain wrecked the original attempt to get under way on Thursday.

LOSERS RALLY

Strangely enough, Mt. Lebanon bagged all three of its wins in the singles events, Paul DeJohn, Bill Fay and Bob Bald, brother of the absent and ailing Ralph, coming through over Pittsburgh Central Boys' Champion Olver Hurst, Irwin Solow, and Bill Kunkel, respectively. Only Solow carried his tussle into an extra set, the consistent Squirrel Hilltopper pushing Fay, West Penn boys' titleholder, to the extraordinary count of 6-0, 7-9, 6-0 ere succumbing.

The Allderdice lads, teaming together nicely, garnered both of the doubles frays, though each was hard fought. The difficulty encountered by Mt. Lebanon in disposing of the none too powerful City combination brightens the already rosy possibility of a Shady Side triumph for Conference honors. If the Fox Chapelites, with their clever quartet of Jimmy Arensberg, Allerton Miller, Dick Sunstein, and High Moor, can come through on Monday, the victory will deprive the Mount racqueteers of their third consecutive capture of the Pitt Placque and postpone for at least another year the permanent retirement of that coveted trophy. The summary:

Mount Lebanon 3, Allerdice 2.

Singles—DeJohn, Mount Lebanon, defeated Hurst, Allderdice, 9-7, 6-2; Fay, Mount Lebanon, defeated Solow, Allerdice, 6-0, 7-9 6-0; Robert Bald, Mount Lebanon, defeated Kunkel, Allerdice, 6-1, 6-2.

Doubles—Goodman and Parker, Allderdice, defeated DeJohn and Wick, Mount Lebanon, 6-4, 7-5; Hurst and Solow, Allderdice, defeated Fay and Robert Bald, Mount Lebanon, 7-5, 6-3.

PANTHERS LOSE

Dr. Dave O'Loughlin's Pitt varsity netters conclude their '34 campaign today by encountering Grove City on the Trees Field layout. The Panthers downed their Crimson rivals decisively in Mercer County territory in the season's inaugural and they aim to repeat the dose this afternoon and thereby clinch possession of the mythical tri-state college championship. The Blue and Gold is undefeated hereabouts to date, the lone Golden Cat setback having been an 8-1 wallop absorbed at the hands of Navy at Annapolis.

Meanwhile Grant Siverd's Dukes will hit the down-river trail for Geneva in the hope that success will perch on the Red and Blue banner for the first time since the Bluffites' initial Carnegie Tech joust early this month. West Virginia took the Hillmen over by a 6-3 margin here yesterday, the engagement being exceedingly well battled as four three-set man-to-man skirmishes were split evenly. Again, however, Duquesne proved distressingly weak in the doubles. The summary:

West Virginia 6, Duquesne 3.

Singles—Woodhull, West Virginia, defeated Purcell, Duquesne, 6-4, 6-3; Getty, Duquesne, defeated Owen, West Virginia, 8-6, 1-6, 6-3; Petruska, Duquesne, defeated Ruble, West Virginia, 4-6, 6-1, 6-4; Lea, West Virginia, defeated Fagan, Duquesne, 4-6, 6-1, 6-4; Shafer, West Virginia, defeated Rohrbaugh, Duquesne, 6-2, 6-2; McFarlane, West Virginia, defeated Higgins, Duquesne, 6-8, 6-2, 6-1.

Doubles—Woodhull and Owen, West Virginia, defeated Purcell and Rowan, Duquesne, 6-0, 6-4; Lea and Shafer, West Virginia, defeated Getty and Petruska, Duquesne, 6-1 6-1; McGuinness and Higgins, Duquesne, won from McFarland and Ruble, West Virginia, by default.

President's Son In Henley Meet

PHILADELPHIA, May 26.—(AP.)—Franklin Roosevelt, Jr., son of the President, is among the hundreds of oarsmen competing today in the thirtieth annual American Henley regatta on the Schuylkill River. The President's son is No. 6 in the Harvard University freshman crew which meets Navy and Penn in a three-cornered clash at 5 o'clock.

Twelve races have attracted 38 crews. They will be over the regulation Henley distance of one mile and 550 yards with the exception of the interscholastic eight-oared event which will be over a mile course.

A tri-cornered event featuring Navy, Penn and Harvard varsity crews for the Adams cup climaxes the regatta.

Bob Roche Manager Of Willows Pool

Announcement was made today that the Willows Pool swimming center has been taken over by the borough of Oakmont and will be operated under the management of Robert (Bob) Roche, of Oakmont. The official opening is set for Memorial Day.

Roche is a former Princeton crew captain. He is a member of the Oakmont Boat Club and keenly interested in the promotion of all water sports.

Hastings Funeral Set for Today

Funeral services for Charles Elliott (Andy) Hastings, former University of Pittsburgh football star, who died Wednesday, will be held today from his former home at 410 North Higland avenue.

A host of former prominent Pitt athletes, members of the university faculty and athletic department and local sports figures will attend.

KNIGHTS ADD TO LEAD

War dispatches from the Mid-Atlantic League front today told of the rout of Huntington by the Black Knights of Beckley and of sharp fighting in the other theaters, particularly in the Zanesville-Charleston sector.

With a barrage of four homers, three doubles and two triples, not to mention the firing of Pitcher Tommy Roberts, who struck out nine Red Birds, Beckley last night conquered Huntington, 16 to 3. The game, in which the Knights scored nine times in the eighth, gives the winners a stronger grip on first place.

At Charleston the home-town boys started off with a bang and clouted Zanesville into 4-to-2 submission, but they failed to hold their gains, and the Ohioans lashed a counter offensive to down the Senators, 7 to 3, in the final of the twin engagement.

Meanwhile the other Ohio members of the loop gained ground on West Virginia and Pennsylvania. Springfield, in a rollicking contest characterized by plenty of errors, trounced Wheeling, 5 to 2. Dayton, outhit, 9 to 4, beat Johnstown, 4 to 2.

In the Pennsylvania State Association, the Jeannette Reds took second place by defeating Washington, 6 to 1 and McKeesport landed its initial victory, downing Greensburg, 11 to 5.

Salvation Army Fosters Athletics

Health building is one of the functions of the Salvation Army work given little thought by the general public. The headquarters of the Salvation Army downtown boasts a fully-equipped gymnasium which is used for calisthenics, wrestling, gymnastics and other sports calculated to build better bodies.

The physical department also contains a splendid swimming pool, where swimming and life saving lessons are given.

This is only one of 20 major and numerous minor activities for which the Salvation Army is conducting a campaign to raise $108,500.

Keystone Club Holds Swim Meet Tonight

Sixteen Allegheny Mountain Association swimming records will be at stake tonight when the Keystone Athletic Club stages its first annual spring water carnival.

Lenore Kight, Anna Mae Gorman, Johanna Gorman and Louise Clarke, members of the women's national relay championship team, of the Carnegie Library Club, of Homestead, will compete.

Thirty district amateur clubs have entered athletes in the meet. Preliminaries are being run off this afternoon.

Two Men Fined In Fake Gem Sale

Two men, charged with attempting to sell a "diamond" ring, valued, police said, at 50 cents, for $7, were fined $25 each with the alternative of 30 day jail sentences after a hearing in Central Police Court.

They are Edward Jackson, of Detroit, and Harold Davis, of 202 Stockton avenue. They were arrested on the complaint of Charles W. Main, of 1115 Swissvale av

NEW YORK: Dear Walter, let us extend our very sincere thanks for your fine tribute to our dear Texas Ilant night; she counted you as one of her dearest friends.—Mr. and Mrs. Michael Guinan.

I eulogized the late Texas Guinan often before she passed on. She was one of my dearest friends. Texas Guinan was a grand person—charitable, kind and loyal. Nobody could ever use profanity before her or her girls. She didn't drink lager or likker—if that will please the drys. And we all miss her—but too much. I will continue to eulogize "Tex" whenever the mood summons.

Magic Heads Pitt Bill

Jack Gwynne, one of the country's better now-you-see-it-now-you-don't manipulators, is the cream of the Pitt's new stage bill, which goes under the title of "Harem Frolics." Just why it goes under the title of "Harem Frolics" is not quite clear to your still slightly puzzled correspondent. Unless it gets its name from a mild dance put on by a mild dancer traveling under the cognomen of "Little Egypt."

To return to Mr. Gwynne, who really is a slick article as a magician, one can do no less than say that he is the best the town has seen since Howard Thurston's last appearance here. Gwynne has quite a category of the old standbys, and several new ones, the best of the lot being the vanishing fishbowls. "The Vanishing Elephant" is not bad, either.

Acting as master of ceremonies is Freddy Stritt, who for some reason or another calls himself "The Sultan's Jester." To do full justice to Mr. Stritt, I wish to call attention to the fact that his fun is funnier near the end of the show than when he opens it by singing something about the audience wanting its money back. Next to Gwynne stand Stearns and Dean, who just about walk away with the show with their Wooden Soldier number. The Mayfield Trio are a fairly good adagio team.

"Twin Husbands," the film bill, is a harmless little crook comedy-drama, which proves, among other things, that that very good villain, John Miljan, should never try to become a romantic figure on the screen. Shirley Grey and Monroe Owsley are also in it.—K. K.

Drama, Comedy In Regent Bill

The Regent double bill of the current week includes melodrama, with a slick detective, and comedy. "The Crime Doctor" is the yarn of the sleuthing angle, in which Otto Kruger, Karen Morley and Nils Asther are the principals. Kruger is a grand detective, but he is unable to hold the love of his wife, and trouble piles up for all of them when a murder is committed in such a way as to make an innocent man appear guilty. In "He Couldn't Take It," the comedy, Ray Walker plays a boy who can't hold a job long because of his flying fists. They come into good use, however, when he becomes a process server, and he finally thwarts a villain. Virginia Cherrill and George Stone are other leading players.

Hot From Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, May 26.—Hello! Sparks from the whirligig—At the Wilber May swimming party Irene Bentley slipped and bumped her pretty snozzle. Peaches Jackson skidded on the tile floor and got a knee gash. But all in all, everybody had a swell time. Ross Clark without Merry Fahrney, which comes under the heading of news. Leo Morrison, Helen Vinson, Tom May, little Mary Ann Jackson (remember her in those Mack Sennett "Smith Family" comedies?), Marjorie Booth, Ernie Torgler, Jack Nemar, and others.

"I wish I could think of a funny comedian to call you!"

Jean Parker not only received a nice, new contract from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, but she was rewarded with another boost toward stardom. She has been assigned the very dramatic role of the crippled doll-maker in "Have a Heart," the David Butler story, which the author will also direct . . . Colin Clive, British actor, has signed with Warners to be featured in a series of three productions . . . Pert Kelton is under contract to RKO, but Sol Wurtzel, producing for Fox, learned she had a few weeks between films and promptly borrowed her for the stellar honors in "Wanted," which Louis King will direct. Russell Hardie, Rosemary Ames, Nils Asther and Henry B. Walthall will be in the cast.

Wanderings around Hollywood: Walter Wanger, recently resigned M-G-M associate producer, airplaned it Monday night for Kansas City, to meet Harlan Dennison, Wall street broker, who is to back him in his independent venture. Wanger will not make any of the so-called star raids, but declared he would enter into competition with major producers for any box office stars whose contracts are about to expire.

Mae West In Fur And Slacks

It could happen only in Hollywood. A $21,000 limousine swung into the Paramount studio and drew up before the row of dressing-rooms. A dapper Negro chauffeur leaped to open the door. Down stepped Mae West wearing a blue beret, a white turtle-necked sweater, gray slacks and a Manchurian mink coat.

Lombardo's Tunes, Film In Stanley

By KARL KRUG

The finest rendition of Irving Berlin's "Easter Parade" I have ever heard served as the happiest number on Guy Lombardo's "in person" program in the Stanley yesterday. The red-coated Canadians offer a half-hour of honest-to-goodness melody, sticking to their trade from start to finish. You will find no dancing girl groups, comedians, acrobats or jugglers in the Lombardo entourage, but if its music you crave I can heartily recommend the present incumbent of the Stanley stage.

Played throughout in that languorous tempo for which Lambardo is noted, the program includes "Little Dutch Mill," "Love Thy Neighbor" and "Inka Dinka Doo," with the first named giving "Easter Parade" a close race for top honors on the bill. Interspersed with vocal work and sparkling piano interludes and staged in the finest of taste, the Lombardo style of entertainment may be the solution of stage shows in movie houses. If I am any judge of the mood of a theater audience, I think that first house-ful in the Stanley yesterday was perfectly content with the Lombardo presentation.

Simple, direct and to the point, and carrying no frills nor furbelows, the Canadians are a competent lot, serving up just enough melody of the latest popular blend to satisfy any audience. Their week here should be a prosperous one.

With accent on the comedy, and carrying a wild melodramatic climax that fails to upset an entertaining talkie, Darryl Zanuck's "Looking for Trouble" is the Stanley screen feature. It is noteworthy for what many observers regard as Jack Oakie's best performance to date in pictures, and it serves as the first vehicle to star Spencer Tracy and Oakie. That it was directed by William Wellman, one of the better handlers of robust, red-blooded screen plays, was probably to its benefit. Dealing with the exciting life of the telephone company's "trouble shooters," it also dips into murder, burglary and arson, with a dash of wire-tapping on the side.

The feminine principals are Constance Cummings, Arlene Judge and Judith Wood, and the romance, if you're interested, is served up in copious doses by the Messrs. Tracy and Oakie and the Misses Cummings and Judge. Just to keep the record straight, Miss Wood is the menace, as is the Long Beach earthquake.

With Spencer Tracy turning in his usual competent performance, it is the moon-faced Oakie who deserves special commendation for a difficult role handled with unusual skill. That Oakie didn't overdo the part of Casey, the "hick from Asuza," is greatly to his credit. He has gone haywire with such parts before, but not with this one. The picture lags when he is out of it. Leonard Praskins and Elmer Harris, authors of the story saw to it that both Tracy and Oakie got plenty of speedy dialogue and both made the most of it.

"Loooking for Trouble" is almost a throw-back to the days of the 10-20-30-cent melodrama, yet its action is speedy and its comedy grand.

Myrtle Smith Wins a Beauty Contest

THE SILLY season is starting. Myrtle Smith, who sells gloves in Plopberg's Bargain Basement, was the recent winner of a beauty contest conducted by that department store. May I present you with a few reactions? . . .

* * *

A PRESS AGENT: She'll be a wow! I'll have her alleged face spread from one end of the country to the other. "The Bargain Basement Beauty." Just what the public loves; that good old Cinderella stuff. And is she dumb? Wow!

I think I'll write an article for her entitled, "Beauty and Brains Always Go Together." She's just dopey enough to sign it . . .

* * *

HER KID BROTHER: Aw, what's all the excitement about? You'd think she'd been elected President or somethin', the way everybody's carryin' on.

So they think she's beautiful, do they? Cripes, they oughta get a slant at her early in the mornin' before she slaps that junk all over her map! . . .

* * *

PLOPBERG, THE STORE OWNER: Think of it, mamma, a million dollars' worth of publicity. As sure as you're my wife, it's the greatest thing what ever happened to me. From now on, the Plopberg Bargain Basement hires only the pretty girls. If—

What's that? Don't talk foolish. I don't know this Smith girl hardly at all. After all these years, you're getting jealous? No, I'm telling you. I don't know her. Hundreds of girls I got working for me; should I know each one in person? I——

* * *

All right, mamma. That's enough. A headache you're giving me. So help me, I should drop dead if I ever hire another beauty. I don't want no arguments with you. From now on my girls will be at least 50—and each one will look like this feller Frankenstein . . .

* * *

MYRTLE'S FATHER: Well, fellers, I can tell you now that I knew it all along. She was a cinch right from the bell. Great kid, my girl. And she's startin' just the same as a lot of others started too.

Myrtle oughta make a lot of dough outa this thing. And I'm gonna see to it that she doesn't toss it away. Bein' as she's only a kid, she needs somebody older and wiser to manage her. So I'm tossin' up my job this afternoon and takin' her in hand myself.

First of all, though, I'm gettin' me one of them new Klassy Kar roadsters on time. I oughta be able to pick one up for a grand or so. In a case like this, a man's gotta live up to his position . . .

* * *

MYRTLE'S MOTHER: I don't do a thing all day. Not a thing. All I do is walk around and look for those women whose daughters have been so smart for years. I had a wonderful time today. I saw Mrs. Stonebrain, Mrs. Plamph and Mrs. Kronkopf all standing together with their daughters. And did I give them the horse laugh!

For years they've been giving it to me. Now it's my turn! . . .

* * *

A DEFEATED CONTESTANT: What I couldn't tell about them contests! When a funny-lookin' mope like that Myrtle Smith can walk off with the prize, it just sorta gives you a rough idea.

She thought she was puttin' somethin' over, but I saw her givin' the eye to that bald-headed judge. And I happen to know that she went out with that other judge—the newspaper feller—right after the contest. That's fine, ain't it? Believe me, if I couldn't win on the level, I wouldn't want it.

I only hope I meet that guy again some time. I mean the guy at the party that night who promised to fix it for me to win. I'll fix him, the dirty double-crosser! . . .

* * *

SIX PHOTO EDITORS: I don't care if Plopberg is one of our biggest advertisers. I'm not going to spoil the looks of my layout by sticking an ugly kisser like that in it. No, sir.

Tell you what you do. Make up a half-column cut of that dame, and stick it back on the page opposite the want-ads. That'll satisfy the boss—and to hell with Plopberg . . .

* * *

A CONTEST WINNER OF FIVE YEARS AGO: Gee, I'll never forget the time I grabbed that prize. What a fuss they made over me! And how those press agents and rich guys hopped me up!

I'll never forget what a cinch I thought life was gonna be. I had an idea that stars like Gloria Swanson and Billie Dove would be right out of the picture the minute I hit Hollywood. And the nearest I ever got to California was Jersey City.

I suppose this Myrtle Smith won't be going back to Plopberg's now. I think I'll step in tomorrow and see if I can get her job . . .

* * *

MYRTLE SMITH: Isn't it all just too wonderful? Imagine them picking me as the most beautiful girl of them all! I'm so thrilled I really don't know what to say.

Of course, I'll have to be careful after this. They all tell me I have a wonderful career ahead of me. No more sweets or pastries, and no more late hours. Parties are out altogether. Except tonight and tomorrow night, of course, because there'll be some wonderful people in each place.

What will I do? Why, naturally, I'll go to Hollywood. With a little experience, I'll be just as good as Garbo or Crawford. A very rich man told me so only last night. I'm going to his party tonight in Jersey City.

I'll succeed all right. I know some beauty winners don't. But I—I'm different . . .

Darrow Report, Like Wickersham's Only With Beard

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

Shame that Bill Bryan couldn't have lived to see silver get another grip on the flying trapeze.

He always had a fatherly interest in that white metal. But thin dimes never got popular because they stuck to wet bars. Bill thought he got around that by putting over prohibition. The bars got wetter and the dimes thinner.

We sat at a boarding house table in Dayton, Tenn. Strange, but Darrow was also there. Darrow was defending the monkeys. The judge almost broke it up when he looked around and said:

"Where's the prisoner?"

Now, Darrow is in the limelight again with a document that Gen. Johnson claims is the Wickersham report with a beard.

Gable, Loy, Powell In Penn Film

By MICHAEL SHAW

Clark Gable, William Powell and Myrna Loy struggle manfully with a trite story in "Manhattan Melodrama," the Penn's new screen attraction.

It's the one about the foster-brothers who rise from New York's East Side, one becoming Broadway's ace gambler, the other governor of the state. Of course they both love the same girl, but when she leaves the sporting Mr. Gable to marry the high-minded Mr. Powell, there are no hard feelings. Mr. Gable reveres Mr. Powell too much for that.

In fact, Mr. Gable eventually commits murder to help his hero's campaign. Mr. Powell, as district attorney, convicts him; then, elected governor, he faces the stunning problem of whether, as a servant of the people, he has the right to save his boyhood chum from the electric chair.

Mr. Powell remains true to his ideals, at the cost of Mr. Gable's life and his own career. But Miss Loy is there to comfort him at the end.

Shots of the Gen. Slocum disaster, the young Trotsky haranguing a crowd from a soapbox, and the Dempsey-Firpo fight help provide a rather interesting background typical of Manhattan.

But the picture is chiefly distinguished for the honest workmanlike acting of Mr. Gable. In his last three appearances—"It Happened One Night," "Men in White," and "Manhattan Melodrama"—Mr. Gable has been so efficient and so attractive that even those who once sneered at him as a mere matinee idol must surely grant him a well-merited admiration.

Mr. Powell is only a shade less effective as once more he goes through the role so familiar to him—the dynamic lawyer who sways juries amid almost hysterical popular acclaim.

Miss Loy is very much the same as she was in "The Prizefighter and the Lady"— and you can't blame her, for some of the lines she speaks to Mr Gable are amazingly like the ones she spoke to Mr. Max Baer. Regardless of what she says, her beauty is an asset in any picture.

New Bill Monday In Fulton

The current Fulton attraction, "Murder in Trinidad," will end with today's performances. Beginning Monday the screen feature in that theater will be "Half a Sinner," film based on the stage comedy, "Alias the Deacon," with Burton Churchill playing the role he created in the play, and Sally Blane and Joel McCrea in the romantic leads.

June Plays Show No Let-Up

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Although it is not likely that the little theaters will see such another week as this, when "Uncle Tom's Cabin" had S. R. O. and Galsworthy's "Skin Game" drew crowds every night, the advent of June can not discourage the amateur disciples of Thespis. At the Experimental Theater next Friday an open meeting for discussion will wind up with a lecture by Freeman Hammond on "The Art of Acting." And on June 5-7 the final production of the year will be given—a three-act comedy by Sana Mouromtzeff, entitled "If Every Wish Came True." Isabel Yealy will direct.

Mr. Seibel

As is the custom with unproduced plays, the one to be put on next Monday at the "Y Playhouse" has had its title changed. David Cornman, the playwright, now calls it "Mars Over Venus," instead of "Don't Go Forth Naked." The mythological implications are a bit risque.

Down in Ben Avon a new group has blossomed forth called the Avon Players—but not of Stratford. Last night they gave four one-act plays in the Presbyterian Church, the principal feature being "Ile," by Eugene O'Neill. Jane Ellen Hall is in charge of this group, organized last December.

The Resurrection Players of the South Hills will present "Icebound," Owen Davis' Pulitzer prize play, next Thursday. This three-act drama will be staged in the Brookline Public School. The South Hills Community Players wave "Lady Windermere's Fan" in the Washington School June 6-9.

The Seniors of P. C. W. will put on "The Torch Bearers" June 6-7; Perry High School announces "Beggar on Horseback" for June 7-8; Carrick High School will give "The Perfect Alibi" May 31 and June 1.

With so many budding dramatic talents, it is not surprising that the Drama School at Carnegie Tech has announced a summer course for those who wish to learn how to act. Diction, dancing, stage-craft, lighting, pantomime and makeup are among the esoteric arts to be made plain for everybody.

STOCK PRICES CONTINUE RALLY

NEW YORK, May 26.—Continuing yesterday's rally, the stock market moved quietly higher in the early trading today. Improvement was fairly general.

Gains by sizeable fractions to around a point were recorded by United States Industrial Alcohol, United States Steel, Hove Sound, Santa Fe, Chrysler, United Aircraft and Western Union. American Telephone was a little better than steady.

While news affecting the financial district was mixed, much interest was expressed in the monthly bulletin of the Federal Reserve Board, which, despite strikes and other worries, noted favorable signs of business improvement throughout the country.

As an indication of an expansion of public spending, there was a drop in the circulation of high-denomination paper money and an increase in the amount of bills of $20 and less outstanding from the Treasury and Federal Reserve banks. This was seen as evidence that there is an increased demand for currency to finance normal commercial operations. It was pointed out that bills of $50 and above are not normally employed for business purposes as are those of lower denomination. The board reported:

"Industrial activity increased further in March, and in April there was a considerable growth in factory employment and payrolls."

Notwithstanding labor handicaps, motor car production estimates from Detroit for May place the total at 350,000 units compared with 378,983 in April. In some quarters it had been feared the decline would be much greater. The current month, it was said, has produced no definite trend in the sales picture.

Few important changes were recorded by leading foreign currencies at the opening of trading. Sterling eased 3/8 of a cent to $5.09 1/8 and the French franc was unchanged at 6.60 3/4 cents.

CROP DAMAGE BOOMS WHEAT

CHICAGO, May 26.—Material new advances in wheat values early today accompanied reports of continued disastrous crop conditions over wide area. Active general buying was in evidence.

Opening at 1/8 to 1 cent advance, July 92 1/4-1/2, wheat quickly mounted further. Corn started unchanged to 3/8 up, and subsequently showed all-around gains.

RATE OF STEEL OPERATIONS SHRINKING

By B. E. V. LUTY

Production of steel is on the down grade, the seasonal influence overcoming the influence of buyers stocking steel under contracts made before the price advance of last month, shipment under such contracts permitted only through June 30.

The peak rate of production of ingots appears to have been reached week before last, at around 60 per cent of capacity, while last week may be estimated at 58 per cent and this week at 56 per cent.

Before the depression the average time for the spring peak in production fell in the latter part of March. This year the peak has fallen a month and a half later because of three influences. In a depression buyers postpone ordering as long as possible, being sure they will receive prompt delivery. There was a chill in March, on account of the Wagner bill, causing postponement of some buying. Production against stocking did not begin until the latter part of April, adding a few points to the percentage rate.

Unless something quite unexpected occurs MMay will be left as the high month, with an average rate of about 57 per cent, against 54.19 per cent for April, 47.81 per cent for March, 42.53 per cent for February and 34.13 per cent for January. While seasonal decline was always marked in the active period there were wide variations in the extent.

It is suspected that mills increased their production recently more than necessary, anticipating more stocking than is actually occurring. The disposition to stock is strong with only a few classes of consumers while many cannot stock or do not care to do so.

AUTO OUTPUT TAPERING

The only marked decreases in steel requirements are in the automobile and farm implement industries. Besides decreasing production week by week the automobile industry is liquidating stocks of certain parts and a little steel left over from the accumulation of last September and October, while apart from the seasonal influence the farm implement industry has been affected by the drought.

There is no marked swing, seasonal or otherwise, in fabricated structural steel. Movement from mill to fabricating shop has been steady except for a slight increase, and will continue without material change.

Production of steel for railroad use increased up to late April, since when there has been little change, nor is any important change expected before August, when rolling of rails will be virtually completed, while car and locomotive material is expected to continue active.

Oil country tubular goods have been slowly growing more active since last November and are doing much better than a year ago, while prospects for drilling are favorable.

The numerous small lines of steel consumption are doing relatively well as a whole, taking a much larger proportion of all the steel made than they do in the active period. Some consumers are taking much more steel than ever before.

AWAIT LABOR OUTCOME

There is no stocking of steel or disposition to stock, by either producers or buyers, in anticipation of labor trouble in the steel industry. On the other hand some buyers are conservative, fearing there may be labor troubles which will interfere with the consumption of steel rather than its production.

For the third week the tin plate mills have operated at an average of 75 per cent, after nine weeks at about 80 per cent, but a marked slowing down is expected in the next few weeks. Production in the 12 months through this month will closely approximate the calendar year record of 1,968,280 gross tons, made in 1929, and will exceed that in any other calendar year, but a year ago there were minimum stocks of tin plate and cans while now there are large stocks.

The scrap market has become more thoroughly inactive as there are not even efforts of the small dealers to sell to the large dealers. Heavy melting steel is regarded as quotable at $12 to $12.50 as a nominal quotation, representing $2 decline within five weeks, and some small distress lots have gone at well below $12. Mills are thoroughly liquidating their stocks.

M'LEOD HAILS STEAGALL BILL AS VICTORY

Federal Reserve.

DETROIT, May 26.—Congressman Clarence J. McLeod, champion of the 100 per cent payoff legislation for bank depositors, told an enthusiastic group of 2,000 Michigan Federal Reserve depositors in Cass Technical High School:

"This meeting is a semi-victory celebration."

As his own bill to return to the public its deposits in closed banks was side-tracked in Congress, Representative McLeod went on to explain:

"I mean that passage of the Steagall bill is as certainly a victory for the depositors as passage of the McLeod bill itself would be. It is not a complete measure, however. It lacks the terms which would compel the executives to enforce the payoff measure, even in its limited state.

"I want to announce that I have the solemn promise of Congressman Steagall himself that next week when he confers with the Senate committee he certainly will insist upon having the payoff measures retained in the bill.

"I confidently expect to get the remaining seven names I need on the petition to bring my bill out of committee and bring it to a vote on the floor of the House on June 11. And when it goes to a vote I am confident it will pass."

MALNUTRITION TOLL HEAVY

Doctors co-operating with the Allegheny County Child Health Committee have discovered that 46 per cent of city children and 26 per cent of country children, from 2 to 6 years of age, in 2,835 relief cases examined, were suffering from malnutrition, a report today reveals.

All of the children examined, according to Miss Martha Leslie, the committee's executive secretary, were children from families receiving unemployment relief.

At a meeting of the committee in Children's Hospital yesterday, she pointed out, as did Dr. H. T. Price, committee chairman, that social workers have followed up every case in these homes, with the result that acute defects have received attention and serious health needs supplied.

A member of Congress for six years, Wilson left the House in 1913 to serve in President Wilson's cabinet. He was made chief of the then newly-created Department of Labor.

During the war years and until 1921 he served on the Council of National Defense.

Have You the Room I Want?

I am a stranger in Pittsburgh. I just arrived. Many are coming "in" NOW. I want to be near my work, but in a pleasant location, I want a homelike room with nice people. I am only one of hundreds of young men that want the same.

I do not know your street names so I shop up and down the Sun-Telegraph "To Rent—Rooms" advertisements — not up and down the street for signs. You probably have just the room I am looking for. Won't you help me to find your room by advertising it in the "To Rent—Room" want ads of the Sun-Telegraph? Phone GRant 5400.

The Thin Man

By DASHIELL HAMMETT

His trial on the charge of murdering Israel Swan in Hinsdale County on March 1, 1874, was begun on April 3, 1883. It was proven that each member of the party except Packer possessed considerable money. The defendant repeated his former statement, wherein he claimed that he had only killed Bell, and had done so in self-defense. On April 13, the jury found the defendant guilty with the death penalty attached. A stay of execution was granted to Packer, who immediately appealed to the Supreme Court. In the meantime he was transferred to the Gunnison Jail to save him from mob violence.

In October, 1885, the Supreme Court granted a new trial and it was then decided to bring him to trial on five charges of manslaughter. He was found guilty on each charge and was sentenced to serve eight years for each offense, making a total of 40 years.

He was pardoned on January 1, 1901, and died on a ranch near Denver on April 24, 1907.

While Gilbert was reading this, I got myself a drink. Dorothy stopped dancing to join me. "Do you like him?" she asked, jerking her head to indicate Quinn.

"He's all right."

"Maybe, but he can be terribly silly. You didn't ask me where I stayed last night. Don't you care?"

"It's none of my business."

"But I found out something for you."

Letter of Warning

"What?"

"I stayed at Aunt Alice's. She's not exactly right in the head, but she's awfully sweet. She told me she had a letter from my father today warning her against Mamma."

"Warning her how? Just what did he say?"

"I didn't see it. Aunt Alice has been mad with him for several years and she tore it up. She says he's become a Communist and she's sure the Communists killed Julia Wolf and will kill him in the end. She think's it's all over some secret they betrayed."

I said: "Oh my God!"

"Well, don't blame me. I'm just telling you what she told me. I told you she wasn't exactly right in the head."

"Did she tell you that junk was in the letter?"

Dorothy shook her head. "No. She only said the warning was. As near as I remember she said he wrote her not to trust Mamma under any circumstances and not to trust anybody connected with her, which I suppose means all of us."

"Try to rememeber more."

"But there wasn't any more. That's all she told me."

"Where was the letter from?" I asked.

"She didn't know—except that it had come airmail. She said she wasn't interested."

Thinks Him Dangerous

"What did she think of it? I mean, did she take the warning seriously?"

"She said he was a dangerous radical—they're her very words — and she wasn't interested in anything he had to say."

Gilbert, book in hand, came over to us. He seemed disappointed in the story I had given him. "It's very interesting," he said, "but, if you know what I mean, it's not a pathological case." He put an arm around his sister's waist. "It was more a matter of that or starving."

"Not unless you want to believe him," I said.

Dorothy asked: "What is it?"

"A thing in the book," Gilbert replied.

"Tell him about the letter your aunt got," I said to Dorothy.

Not Grown Up Yet

She told him.

When she had finished, he grimaced impatiently. "That's silly. Mamma's not really dangerous. She's just a case of arrested development. Most of us have outgrown ethics and morals and so on. Mamma's just not grown up to them yet."

Nora and Quinn were dancing.

"And what do you think of your father?" I asked.

Gilbert shrugged. "I haven't seen him since I was a child. I've got a theory about him, but a lot of it's guess-work."

I said: "He tried to kill himself today, down in Allentown."

Dorothy cried, "He didn't," so sharply that Quinn and Nora stopped dancing, and she turned and thrust her face up at her brother's. "Where's Chris?" she demanded.

Gilbert looked from her face to mine and quickly back to hers. "Don't be an ass," he said coldly. "He's off with that girl of his, that Fenton girl."

Dorothy did not look as if she believed him.

"She's jealous of him," he explained to me. "It's that mother fixation."

I asked: "Did either of you ever see the Victor Roseben your father had trouble with back when I first knew you?"

Dorothy shook her head. Gilbert said: "No. Why?"

"Just an idea I had. I never saw him either, but the description they gave me, with some easy changes, could be made to fit your Chris Jorgensen."

Visit Pigiron Club

That night Nora and I went to the opening of the Radio City Music Hall, decided we had had enough of the performance after an hour, and left. "Where to?" Nora asked.

"I don't care. Want to hunt up that Pigiron Club that Morelli told us about? You'll like Studsy Burke. He used to be a safe-burglar. He claims to've cracked the safe in the Hagerstown jail while he was doing 30 days there for disorderly conduct."

"Let's," she said.

We went down to Forty-ninth street and, after asking two taxi-drivers, two newsboys, and a policeman, found the place. The doorman said he didn't know about any Burkes, but he'd see. Studsy came to the door. "How are you, Nick?" he said. "Come on in."

He was a powerfully built man of medium height, a little fat now, but not soft. He must have been at least 50, but looked 10 years younger than that. He had a broad, pleasantly ugly, pockmarked face under not much hair of no particular color, and even his baldness could not make his forehead seem large. His voice was a deep bass growl.

I shook hands with him and introduced him to Nora.

"A wife," he said. "Think of that. By God, you'll drink champagne or you'll fight me."

I said we wouldn't fight and we went inside.

Comfortably Shabby

His place had a comfortably shabby look. It was between hours; there were only three customers in the place. We sat at a table in a corner and Studsy told the waiter exactly which bottle of wine to bring. Then he examined me carefully and nodded. "Marriage done you good." He scratched his chin. "It's a long time I don't see you."

"A long time," I agreed.

"He sent me up the river," he told Nora.

She clucked sympathetically. "Was he a good detective?"

Studsy wrinkled what forehead he had. "Folks say, but I don't know. The once he caught me was a accident: I led with my right."

"How come you sicked this wild man Morelli on me?" I asked.

"You know how foreigners are," he said; "they're hysterical. I don't know he's going to do nothing like that. He's worrying about the coppers trying to hang that Wolf dame's killing on him and we see in the paper you got something to do with it and I say to him, 'Nick might not maybe sell his own mother out and you feel like you got to talk to somebody,' so he says he will. What'd you do, make faces at him?"

"He let himself be spotted sneaking in and then blamed me for it. How'd he find me?"

"He's got friends and you wasn't hiding, was you?"

"I'd only been in town a week and there was nothing in the paper saying where I was staying."

"Is that so?" Studsy asked with interest. "Where you been?"

"I live in San Francisco now. How'd he find me?"

"That's a swell town. I ain't been there in years, but it's one swell town. I oughtn't tell you, Nick. Ask him. It's his business."

'Boost' for Nick

"Except that you sent him to me."

"Well, yes," he said, "except that, of course; but then, see, I was putting in a boost for you." He said it seriously.

I said: "My pal."

"How did I know he was going to blow his top? Anyways, he didn't hurt you much, did he?"

"Maybe not, but it didn't do me any good and I—" I stopped as the waiter arrived with the champagne. We tasted it and said it was swell. It was pretty bad. "Think he killed the girl?" I asked.

Studsy shook his head sidewise with certainty. "No chance."

"He's a fellow you can persuade to shoot," I said.

"I know—these foreigners are hysterical—but he was around here all that afternoon."

"All?"

"All. I'll take my oath to it. Some of the boys and girls were celebrating upstairs and I know for a fact he wasn't off his hip, let alone out of here, all afternoon. No kidding, that's a thing he can prove."

"Then what was he worried about?"

"Do I know? Ain't that what I been asking him myself? But you know how these foreigners are."

I said: "Uh-huh. They're hysterical. He wouldn't've sent a friend around to see her, would he?"

Dorothy appears at Nick's apartment and flashes a gun which she says she got in a speakeasy. She is drunk and Nora puts her to bed. Morelli, a gangster, is suspected in Julia's murder.

Nick is shot by Morelli. Police find Dorothy's automatic in Nick's apartment. Dorothy, beaten by Mimi, seeks shelter at Nick's, and tells new story about gun. PRESIDENT McKINLEY IS SHOT BY CZOLGOSZ (Sept. 6, 1901)

The success in the Spanish-American War, the expansion of insular possessions and business prosperity increased the prestige of the United States under President McKinley's administration.

Our part in The Hague Conference (1899), aimed at armament reduction and creating an arbitration court, the expedition to quell the Boxer uprising in China (incited against foreigners) showing readiness to maintain "Open Door" policy, indicated our intent to share actively in the solution of world problems.

President McKinley and Vice President Theodore Roosevelt were re-elected in 1900.

President McKinley's second term ended tragically. An anarchist, Leon F. Czolgosz, shot the President twice at the Pan-American Exposition, Buffalo, N. Y., resulting in his death Sept. 14. The assassin was tried, convicted and executed. (U. S. History)

METALLURGY OF COPPER

Copper (Cu), a reddish, ductile, tough metal, is found in nature mixed with rock (in Northern Michigan); the sulphides as chalcocite (Cu_2S), chalcopyrite ($CuFeS_2$), bornite (Cu_3FeS_3) occur in Montana, Utah; the oxide as cuprite (Cu_2O) and the basic carbonates as malachite [$CuCO_3.Cu(OH)_2$] and azurite [$2CuCO_3.Cu(OH)_2$] are mined in Arizona.

Metallurgy of copper ores:

Carbonate and oxide ores are reduced by heating them with coke in a suitable furnace (smelted like iron).

Sulphides are converted into oxides by roasting, then smelted.

Copper-sulphur-iron ores (above diagram shows steps in process) are roasted first to burn the sulphur to SO_2 (this may be utilized for making sulphuric acid); the iron is then converted into ferrous silicate, removed as slag. The remaining copper is then cast into bars and refined by electrolysis to 99.98% purity. (Chem.)

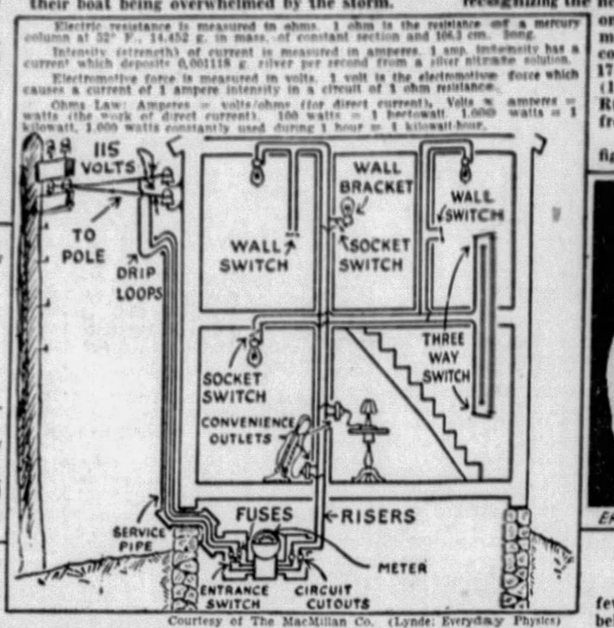
THE MILL ON THE FLOSS

This is one of George Eliot's most earnest novels (publ. 1860).

Beautiful, passionate Maggie is attracted to crippled Philip Wakem, son of a lawyer, blamed by Maggie's father, the Miller Tulliver, for his financial ruin, which hastened also Tulliver's death. Yielding to Tom, her narrow-minded brother, Maggie gives up Philip and visits her cousin Lucy, engaged to cultured Stephen Guest.

Involuntarily Maggie and Stephen are drawn to each other and during an excursion innocently compromised. She is ostracised except by Lucy and Philip, whose happiness had been destroyed.

A great flood devastates the town, Maggie rescues Tom from the mill. Reconciled, they perish, their boat being overwhelmed by the storm.



Electric resistance is measured in ohms. 1 ohm is the resistance of a mercury column at 32° F., 14.452 g. in mass, of constant section and 106.3 cm. long.
Intensity (strength) of current is measured in amperes. 1 amp. intensity has a current which deposits 0.001118 g. silver per second from a silver nitrate solution.
Electromotive force is measured in volts. 1 volt is the electromotive force which causes a current of 1 ampere intensity in a circuit of 1 ohm resistance.
Ohms Law: Amperes = volts/ohms (for direct current). Volts = amperes = watts (the work of direct current). 100 watts = 1 hectowatt. 1,000 watts = 1 kilowatt. 1,000 watts constantly used during 1 hour = 1 kilowatt-hour.

HOW OUR BEST SERVANT, ELECTRICITY, ENTERS THE HOUSE

Two wires from the main line (115 volts tension between them) are attached to insulators outside on the wall and connected by insulated cables, led through steel conduit pipes, to the meter, generally in the basement. Each wire is protected by a fuse before and after the meter. The meter registers in kilowatt hours the electric power used. From the meter, insulated wires lead to outlets, switches, sockets, all connected parallel, to supply the same voltage.

The sizes of the wires are determined by the load in amperes, when every outlet is utilized, depending also on the kind of insulation used according to regulations of the National Board of Fire Underwriters. (General Science) 88-III-A

RUSSO-JAPANESE WAR—JAPANESE CHEERFULLY PREPARE ATTACK

Japan, proud of its old civilization, scorned the upstarts of the West. Yet recognizing the new age, it quickly sized up, remodeling government, laws and army on European lines, during the 19th century. It established a parliament in 1889, developed industry, built railroads, steamships and competed in world's markets. Overpopulated (50,000,000 people on 173,350 sq. miles), it sought to expand into China, which it defeated (1894-1895). Blocked in its annexation of Korea, Japan warred with Russia (1904-1905), gaining Port Arthur, part of Sakhalin and a free hand in Korea. President Theo. Roosevelt was peace mediator.

As foremost power in Asia, Japan became Great Britain's ally, fighting as such in the World War. (World History)

SOME CONTAGIOUS DISEASES AMONG CHILDREN

Measles: It begins like cold with running nose, watery eyes, fever. Mulberry-tinted spots appear on about the third day, first behind ears, forehead, face; it may almost disappear if air is cold; come out again with warmth. It is dangerous for children under 2 years of age. After effects are often severe; patient should be isolated until recovery, at least seven days from onset.

Scarlet fever: Onset is sudden with headaches, fever, sore throat, often nausea. Bright red dots under skin appear in a day or so first on neck, chest, lasting 3-10 days. Then they fade and skin peels off in scales or large pieces. It is very dangerous, both during attack and for after effects (heart-kidney disease). Patient should be isolated at least 30 days.

To lessen danger of infection, avoid sneezing into air and people who do so, public drinking cups, towels and wash your hands thoroughly with soap before each meal. (General Science)

They Didn't Send a Card.

The government is spending five million a day on the people and that's okay.

The government is the people. So it's taking out of one pocket to put in its shoe. We are starting to realize that charity has a home address and doesn't want its mail forwarded to some other place.

We have been pretty liberal with the rest of the world. If we heard of a Hottentot with insomnia, we would drown Africa in a blizzard of headache tablets.

If the yellow river overflowed its yard limits in China, we unraveled our purse strings and went on a generous toot.

That's all right, we guess. Bread cast upon the waters ain't cake. But, when it comes America's turn to get the depression jaspers, we help ourselves.

We are very fortunate we can do it. But, you might think the rest of the world would display some reciprocative twinges. It would have been a nice gesture if Europe, Africa or Asia had offered something, just for the pleasure of refusing it with thanks.

Now, let's take Africa. The monkeys ain't bowling with all the cocoanuts over there. There must be a few loose ones rolling down hills. The Fiji- Islanders might have sent us a couple of bananas last year when we could have used 'em. China has much more rice than it can use. But Hongkong didn't even cable us a cup of tea.

All we wanted was a token of gratitude for past favors. That ain't usury. Just a remembrance. A bit of toast, a camphor ball or a live tiger.

Not a thing arrived. No coffee from Java and no fezzes from Turkey. It's a bitter awakening. But when something happens in Europe again, will we retaliate? Nope, Uncle Sam, the Shylock, will drive right up to the scene of suffering and unload.

We know that North America is the granary of the world. We have plenty over here. But we don't seem able to distribute it in the right places.

Well, a lesson is a lesson. Add 'em up, and you have a college education that your old man didn't pay for. You bought it yourself.

Philadelphia Shows How

Elimination of Extravagance in Municipal Government Is the Paramount Need

J. M. Williams, executive secretary of the Western Pennsylvania branch of the National Economy League, has just returned from Philadelphia with an enthusiastic report of what Mayor J. Hampton Moore has been doing to eliminate waste and extravagance in the municipal government. Conditions in Philadelphia are in many respects so similar to those obtaining here that its experience should be peculiarly interesting to Pittsburghers.

Mayor Moore has reduced Philadelphia's deficit, which was $17,710,637 when he took office in January, 1932, to $8,604,531. Three thousand names have been taken off the city payroll, in large part through not filling vacancies. This has been done without crippling essential municipal services. Philadelphia's experience should encourage Mayor W. N. McNair and the Council to seek ways of economizing. Reduction of the cost of municipal government is the city's paramount need.

Mayor McNair's idiosyncrasies, stormy scenes in Council, and the like, are interesting; but there are more important activities at City Hall of which the people are not privileged to know much at this time, although a full report will be presented later. These are the activities of the Efficiency and Economy Commission, a citizens' organization, which is trying, with the administration's co-operation, to find methods of improving the municipal service and making it less expensive.

Another municipal activity which, while not very exciting, has an important bearing on the people's welfare, is the campaign of the women's clubs and school children to make Pittsburgh cleaner and more beautiful. Public Works Director Leslie M. Johnston, Public Health Director Ray P. Moyer and the Council can be sure of popular approval if they will give all possible aid in this praiseworthy undertaking.

*Dr. Moyer has an inspiring vision, whch he de*scribed recently in a radio talk, of a Pittsburgh whose hillsides and cliffs, now barren and bleak, will be planted with trees and vines and flowering plants; whose rivers, now open sewers, will be restored to their pristine clarity, purity and beauty, and whose air, now so often polluted, will be freed of contamination and admit more of the health-giving sunlight.

Suggesting that the Congress of Women's Clubs take the lead in calling a conference of the Chamber of Commerce and other organizations, with a view to developing a long-term plan for the beautification of Pittsburgh, Dr. Moyer expressed the opinion that if the city were made physically attractive it would become, by reason of being only an overnight ride distant from two-thirds of the population of the United States, one of the nation's chief convention centers. He made a good case for the thesis that civic beauty is commercially profitable.

*A reminder of another requisite for a more in*viting Pittsburgh is found in the report just issued by the Pittsburgh Housing Association of its work during the last three years. To this organization must go the chief credit for what has been accomplished in the movement to get rid of the slums. If poor people could be decently housed, the city not only would be more attractive in appearance, but would be saved from much of the crime and disease with which it is afflicted.

Dr. Moyer mentioned in his address, by the way, a ridiculous objection to the replacement of dark tenements with houses that could be flooded with sunlight, and to purification of the air which would keep skylights from becoming dirty quickly. The objection—save the mark!—is that people would use less artificial light and so the electrical industry would suffer.

We are quite sure that the Philadelphia Company, whose subsidiary, the Duquesne Light Company, furnishes electric service to Pittsburgh, would welcome a cleaner, brighter city in which there was less need for artificial illumination during daylight hours. The Philadelphia Company, celebrating this month the fiftieth anniversary of its organization, is progressive, forward-looking. Otherwise it could not have become so great.

Dr. Moyer's address, crammed with food for thought, contained a reference to the advantages of Pittsburgh as a place in which to spend the summer. He mentioned our proximity to the mountains and alluded to Pymatuning Lake, now in process of formation. With the schools about to close, and vacations to begin, the subject of nearby recreation places is of timely interest to many thousands of families.

*Pymatuning Lake, which will be larger than Chau*tauqua, is not yet ready for camping and boating; but Charles E. Ryder, chief engineer of the State Water and Power Resources Board, reports that the water in the lower reservoir rose 2½ feet during the past month and now covers more than 7,000 acres, and that the upper basin, the wild life sanctuary, with an area of 2,500 acres, has been full since early in March. John M. Phillips, Pittsburgh naturalist, found it swarming with water fowl on a recent visit.

*The Cook Forest State Park must also be men*tioned as a nearby resort that can be counted among Pittsburgh's summer assets. Apropos of wild life, Mrs. W. H. Taylor, wife of the forest ranger stationed in the park, has been making some nice catches of trout lately in Tom's Run in Cook Forest, and John McBeth, who is in charge of the forest observation tower, reports that one evening recently he saw 27 deer from its summit.

The state parks and state forests are owned by the public and maintained at public expense, and the citizens should make full use of the recreation opportunities that they afford. The Department of Forests and Waters at Harrisburg offers to send, free of charge, to anyone who applies, a map showing the location of these places and the principal highways leading to them.

Flash Gordon has led a feverish life, but it is doubtful if he ever had a more harrowing adventure than that which he experiences in tomorrow's issue of Puck, the Comic Weekly section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. This story, vividly pictured by Alex Raymond, has thrills and surprises that will be enjoyed by everyone with red blood.

Quite all that people claim they see
But this weird monster lives today
And turns its Hydra head this way.

It is no dream of troubled sleep
Nor myth that comes across the deep.
A foreign menace and a threat

Sun Spots, Cosmic Dust

Science Seeks the Real Reasons for Our Puzzling Weather.

Human beings are puzzled by the intolerable cold that, last winter, afflicted many parts of the East, and other sections of the country. They are puzzled also, and farmers are impoverished, by the inordinately high winds with clouds of dust that covered the young, growing wheat with a choking blanket, threatening to diminish dangerously a wheat crop that the government has already diminished by paying farmers to plant less.

From the beginning of time, probably, old men have said that the weather was different when they were young, and every season has brought its "unusual," "extraordinary," and disappointing weather.

Now, science seeks to explain "strange weather," instead of merely talking about it. Nothing happens without a cause, be it extreme cold, heat, rain, snow, hail or tornado, and Dr. James H. Scarr, head of the United States Weather Bureau, New York City, believes that some of our "queer weather" may be due to "a vast cloud of star dust" through which the earth is now passing.

It may be due also to the gigantic surface "spots" that are developing on the sun, some of them 40,000 miles wide.

"Star dust," or "cosmic dust," exists in the universe through which the earth is passing, accompanying the sun on its journey. Some scientists think this cosmic dust was "left over" from the making of the universe, or that it is the result of "exploding stars" that burst into fragments millions of years ago, sending dust from the explosion traveling through the ether.

Science also suggests that the sun, when its surface breaks open into the gigantic "spots," discharges enormous quantities of gases, possibly also of dust.

The earth has had experience with dust of its own creation, coming from the mouth of exploding volcanoes, and sometimes traveling all around the world. Science has suggested that "ice ages," through which the earth has passed, have been caused by these great outpourings of volcanic dust, shutting out the sun's light and heat from the earth.

New Yorkers who experienced a temperature of 14 degrees below zero last winter, something never known in New York's history before, and other Americans that saw the temperature drop as low as 30 and 40 degrees below zero, will be interested in Dr. Scarr's surmise that the earth may be starting another "ice age," not because it is losing its heat, but because it is entering new clouds of cosmic dust, similar to those that caused the ice age of long ago.

If we must have another ice age, let us hope and pray that, unlike the other, it will NOT last one million years.

If this problem of earth's strange weather, and the surmises of scientists interest you, you are referred to a full page on the subject, scientifically illustrated, which will be found in the American Weekly, an interesting magazine which is published with the Sunday edition of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and other Hearst newspapers tomorrow and read in more than five million homes.

CALIFORNIA DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

LOS ANGELES, May 26.—Hollywood, likely the most cussed and discussed village in the world, is to a stroller as innocent as a gamboling lambkin. The Hollywood one reads about is to many a state of mind. To this ancient mariner it is a rakish little brig, top-heavy with vanity, jibs guyed out, all sails abloom.

Here smart boulevardiers are jay-walkers and sidewalks generate back fense tattle. From sun-up to sun-down it lives in the tremulous tensity of expectant wonder, a gigantic market of human merchandise. Civic consciousness and commerce are secondary considerations.

Hollywood's interest is solely in personalities. And why not! For here human mediocrity has rippled its finest splendor. The soda water clerk, the filling station boy are tomorrow's Jack Oakies. The hotel manicure girl has the same chance as her heavy-footed manicurist sister, Garbo from Sweden. Or so she believes.

Every girl a potential queen, every boy a potential king, Hollywood has seen every wild, crazy dream come true. Its lexicon will never contain discouragement. Rebuffs mean eventual recognition. For almost every name the world sees etched in electric fire was sparked from depths of despair!

Mary Pickford in faded serge with lunch-box used to wait on yonder corner at 6 a. m. for the dinky street car that would carry her to the studio to wait in line as an extra girl. Chaplin, they will tell you, lived in a shabby room of that frame tumble down where a garage now stands, hugging his $100-a-week hope in a $25-a-week reality. Every nook has been a germinating ground. Every cranny savors the exquisite preciousness of ambition realized. Many have come, of course, to snatch at fame—and miss. But the successful percentage of mediocrity that has attained is higher than anywhere on the globe. Dozens of Lambs Club hangers-on are living in clover out here. No wonder they arrive wide-eyed with hope on every train.

* * *

I fell into casual chat with a maid on a curb bench today. She had arrived by bus from an Illinois town a few days before. A girl in early 20s, I should say. A brave sprite who had been turned away from every casting office she visited. She had nothing to commend her save rustic simplicity. Already Hollywood had cast its halo. She had become a detached dream. I found myself without the usual twinge of sympathy. For, after all, she stood better chance of flying over life's hurdles here than any place one could name. I'd wager 80 per cent of great female stars of the era in their first days here had no more of what are called "the breaks" than this girl of the Hollywood bench.

* * *

Hollywood has innumerable forgotten Karl Danes and Wally Reeds whom Hollywood made and cast into oblivion. That is true of all industries and the arts. Yet I know no class of workers who, having endured all gradations of a swiftly changing endeavor, approach the finishing line so securely, I can spin off reels of names from the ancient regime far more content today than the same number of once successful people in any line named. Very few professions indeed have a Marie Dressler. A grand lady whom Hollywood caught on the lowest dip of the down beat and lifted to triumphal heights no other woman of her time, age and particular type of beauty ever achieved. How often has Gloria Swanson made a come-back! And Lew Cody.

* * *

Come-backs on the Hollywood screen outnumber the come-backs in any other calling. Almost every star has at least been in the corona of eclipse not once but several times. At a cafe called Sardi's last evening I saw three movie stars now riding top gallant. Yet when here four years ago they had been eddied to backwaters. People mentioned them with those tiny but significant shrugs. Great chaps but washed up! A pity!

* * *

Another thing while I seem a bit sentimentally soggy. The kindest, most thoughtful people I've ever encountered are warp and woof of this upstart community. I mean not only the players but the directors, camera men, scenario writers, the supervisors and producers. Writers, most sardonic and sententious in their hoots, are those brought out here and indulged the most luxurious leisure at the highest pay they will ever receive. I'm not clashing symbals for the movies—generally speaking they bore me. Or is any star a particularly close companion. I'm just in a soap-box humor. Full of forensics. And likely a little canal water and a sprinkle of red ants.

LISTEN, WORLD!

Synthetic Lives

SO MANY PEOPLE NEVER REALLY LIVE. They are like mistle-toe which has no roots but clings close to the branches of some oak, and sucks existence from the oak's rich sap.

* * *

SO MANY PEOPLE GO THROUGH LIFE LIKE THAT. They have no roots—no power of their own—no place or pattern, and no private plan, nor any wish to build a life, alone—but live, like parasites, on other lives.

* * *

Time was
When each man made his life
Or went without;
Fought his own battles;
Thought his thoughts,
Or paid the price
Of laziness and fear
And ignorance.
Then came some Stronger One
To lead the tribe,
To think and fight for those
With weaker spines,
And thereby make
A profit for himself;
And now the world is filled
With those who live,
Like rootless mistletoe,
On other lives.

* * *

SUCH PEOPLE NEVER TRULY LIVE AT ALL.
NO THOUGHT OR IMPULSE, ACT OR WORD IS REAL.
THEY'RE ALL SYNTHETIC.
The things they say
Or do or wear,
The way they tint
Their nails
Or wave their hair,
Their party ballot
Or their bill of fare.
Is something someone told them.
Or they've seen, somewhere.

* * *

They do not even
Feel for their own selves—
There's nothing in them
Which can freeze or blaze,
Flood life with color,
Fill the night with song.
Or free them from the bondage of dull days.
Around them whirls
The hotflood-tide of life—
That rich adventure
Which, they say, they crave,
Yet they're as cold
As though they lay within
A tomb, or grave;
THEY CANNOT TAKE THEIR LIFE
FROM LIFE ITSELF,
As mistle-toe sucks sap
From out the oak,
So they suck hate and love
From movie screens;
Find pride and pity
In cheap magazines;
A sense of speeding force
In steel machines.

* * *

SOME PEOPLE
NEVER REALLY COME ALIVE;
THEY HAVE NO MEANING, FILL NO PRIVATE ROLE,
I WONDER IF SUCH PEOPLE HAVE A SOUL.

Once Overs

By J. J. MUNDY

What is your reaction toward a writer who expresses what you know to be your points of deficiency?

Are you aroused to a feeling of antagonism?

Do you think he knows your weaknesses and intends to hurt you?

Do you think of him as a prying old fogy?

Immediately after reading what you think is a personal thrust at you do you desire to find some way of revenge?

To others you say, he must have many vulnerable points himself, otherwise he could not strike so accurately at those of others.

Be honest for a moment.

Is not your feeling of resentment due to your feeling of guilt?

He seems to be familiar with the frailties which you thought securely hidden, therefore you would like to do him injury.

What better proof that you are a violator of laws that, as a good citizen, you should uphold?

When a general accusation makes you squirm, it applies to you.

You would not be so sensitive if you did not deserve it.

Spoils System Odious To Cleveland

By James T. Williams, Jr.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S administration has again been embarrassed by the pernicious political activity alleged against a member of the Democratic National Committee. The President has headed off a congressional investigation of this matter by obtaining and accepting promptly this committeeman's resignation of an important federal office.

But the Roosevelt administration will not be protected against other embarrassing episodes of the same sort until it emulates the example of Grover Cleveland and puts not only the members of the Democratic National Committee but all federal officials on notice that as titular leader of his party Mr. Roosevelt intends to maintain the administrative standards that distinguished the preidency of Grover Cleveland.

One of the reasons why, as Governor of the State of New York and as President of the United States, Mr. Cleveland exemplified the virtues of a great American, and a true Democrat is to be found in his high ideals in regard to public office.

* * *

He Had Contempt For Spoilsmen

FOR the spoilsmen in politics, for all those who abused public office to betray the public interest, Mr. Cleveland had the utmost contempt. That he meant what he said when he affirmed that "public office is a public trust" is clear not only from his own example but from the strict accountability to which he held his appointees.

Under date of July 14, 1886, President Cleveland addressed "to the heads of departments in the service of the general government" a letter that clearly reveals the quality of his patriotism and the ideals of his statesmanship. On the eve of a congressional campaign, when the politicians of his party were most active, Mr. Cleveland siezed the opportunity especially to warn "all subordinates in the several departments and all officeholders under the general government against the use of their official position in attempts to control political movements in their localities."

In this letter, Mr. Cleveland thus defines the obligations that devolve upon those intrusted with the authority and responsibility of public office:

"Officeholders are the agents of the people, not their masters. Not only are their time and labor due to the government, but they should scrupulously avoid in their political action as well as in the discharge of their official duty, offending, by a display of obtrusive partisanship, their neighbors who have relations with them as public officials.

"They should also constantly remember that their party friends from whom they have received preferment have not invested them with the power of arbitrarily managing their political affairs. They have no right as officeholders to dictate the political action of their party associates, or to throttle freedom of action within party lines, by methods and practices which prevent every useful and justifiable purpose of party organization.

"The influence of federal officeholders should not be felt in the manipulation of political primary meetings and nominating conventions. The use by these officials of their positions to compass their selection as delegates to political conventions is indecent and unfair; and proper regard for the proprieties and requirements of official place will also prevent their assuming the active conduct of political campaigns."

* * *

Time to Revive Cleveland Ideals

HAD the high ideals of Grover Cleveland been lived up to, it would not have been necessary for President Roosevelt to condemn certain members of the Democratic National Committee for "practicing" before the executive departments in Washington. They would not have tried to make money out of their committee memberships and they would not have tried, as some members of the committee are still doing, to remain on the committee while holding federal office.

President Roosevelt may decide that now is a good time to republish Grover Cleveland's letter on this live subject and simultaneously to divorce completely all officeholders under this administration from membership on the National Committee or any other comimttee of his party. The power of the President's example would have a cleansing effect not only on the federal service but on the public service in every state in the Union. It would identify the Roosevelt leadership with the American ideals of Grover Cleveland.
